PASTOR CONFESSES HE KILLED AVIS LINNELL WITH POISON

DOCK STRIKERS WANT TUTTLE AS ARBITRATOR

Mayor Fitzgerald, Chairman Hugh Bancroft of the new Dock Board and representatives of the striking longshoremen and of the steamship agents, their employers, met in conference to-day at the Chamber of Commerce in an effort to end the strike which has tied up the business of the port of Boston and has thrown 3,000 longshoremen out of work.

Chairman Bancroft declared before the conference that the prosperity of the port of Boston demanded that the strike be settled at once.

The strikers, during the morning, refused the services of the State Board of Arbitration, but announced their willingness to submit their arbitration to one man, preferably Loctus Tuttle, formerly president of the Boston & Maine Railroad.

Bernard F. Supple, secretary of the state Board of Conciliation and Arbitration, today called at the headquarters of the men in Roughon Hall, Charlestown, and offered the services of the board to arbitrate the strike.

Vote Against State Board.

Secretary Supple was informed by Michael O'Meara of the Union that the different assemblies had unanimously voted not to refer their differences to the State Board. He also told Secretary Supple that the men had nothing personal against the State Board, or against the State; that they were perfectly willing to arbitrate, but that the assemblies in a man were convinced that the State Board did not possess the requisite knowledge of transportation and waterfront matters to enable them to render an intelligent decision.

O'Meara told Secretary Supple that the men were willing to accept a man such as Loctus Tuttle, who is acquainted with transportation problems and recognized as being a fair-minded citizen. He said the men are ready and willing to arbitrate.

Secretary Supple was asked by a reporter:

"Are you here in your official capacity, to bring about a settlement of this strike?"

"Yes."

"How were your overtures received?"

"I would prefer that question be answered by the men themselves."

Just before he started for the conference Chairman Bancroft said to a reporter:

"The interests of the public in the development of the port of Boston require the speedy settlement of the strike, if such a thing is possible.

"If the business of the port of Boston is to be built up, it will be necessary that more steamships must be persuaded to come here. That means that conditions here must be such as to attract steamships.

"Practically every steamship line in the foreign trade is under a foreign flag and their home ports are across the water. They will not come to Boston in preference to such other competing ports as New York, Philadelphia or Baltimore for sentimental reasons. They come to a port only because as a business proposition it is an attractive place at which to do business.

"A long-continued strike will certainly not be a means to bring business to the port of Boston.

Will See Freight Handlers.

The only efforts that have been made to move the ships now tied up by the longshoremen's strike was made last night on board the Leyland liner Cambrian, loading at the Boston & Albany docks for London, and the Houston liner Hellenic from South American ports, which is discharging cargo at the National docks.

Both these vessels had their crews working all night, paying them regular longshoremen's wages for overtime work. Although some progress was made on both vessels, the number of men at work was so much smaller than usual that not much cargo was moved.

A committee of the longshoremen will confer with the officials of the Railway Freight Handlers' Union and the Freight Clerks' Union and try to secure the cooperation of these unions to stop the work of loading and discharging cargoes by crews of vessels.

To-day was the coldest day of the year in Boston, and the weather bureau announces that before the backbone of the cold wave which has Boston in its grip is broken the temperature will drop to zero.

Three degrees above zero at 7 a. m. and 8 a. m. was the lowest recorded to-day in Boston, but at suburban points zero was reached.

Warm weather is promised for to-morrow. It is expected more snow will come. It is coming from a storm that is now raging in the Southwest, which is moving slightly northeast. If this storm comes to Boston on time the temperature should go up to 30.

It is freezing in Texas. It was 12 below at Huntington and Northfield, Vt., this morning, the coldest points in New England. The warmest was 10 above, at Nantucket. It was 6 above in Boston at 8 o'clock.

Whole Country Shivers.

The entire country is in the grip of the cold wave, with the exception of the Gulf States and the Pacific coast. Some of the cold temperatures are: Thirty-eight below at Minnedosa, Ont.; 32 below at Duluth; 24 below at St. Paul and 12 below at Kansas City.

Zero weather prevails as far south as Oklahoma, the line extending from Oklahoma through St. Louis, through Cleveland and a little to the north of Boston.

At 8 o'clock this morning the wind blew in Boston at a twenty-four-mile-an-hour clip, the highest point being reached last night, when it blew thirty-six miles. At Nantucket and Portland the wind rose to

GALVIN DESCRIBES ST. PETER'S IN ROME

St. Peter's in Rome, the largest and most gorgeous edifice in all Christendom, will be described in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN by C. O'Connell Galvin, the AMERICAN'S special correspondent at the Papal Consistory. In his article Mr. Galvin tells the impressions St. Peter's made on his mind the first time he stepped inside of the doors of the wonderful basilica. In to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

The Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, Who Confesses to the Murder by Poison of Miss Avis Linnell

SCHOONER HITS ON DEER ISLAND

The fishing schooner Hattie F. Knowlton, with three men aboard, was swept ashore on the light house bar at Deer Island early to-day. The three men struggled ashore, being unable to launch a small boat. The sea was running high at the time.

The schooner had been anchored in President's Roads, but at high tide the lines of both anchors snapped and the vessel was at the mercy of the sea and wind.

It is believed the vessel will be a total loss. She is a thirty-three-ton schooner, and usually carries a crew of ten men.

The three men who came ashore suffered greatly from the intense cold. The water that soaked their clothing and turned into ice.

The men went to the Deer Island pumping station, where they dried their clothing, and then started for Boston.

At daylight to-day, after a bitter night, a three-masted British schooner, badly leaking, was sighted driving south along the Cape shore, flying signals of distress, with Nantucket Shoals only ten miles away and to leeward. The revenue cutter Acushnet, at Nantucket, put out in the gale to give assistance.

SOMERVILLE GIRL IS ATTACKED BY ROBBER

Miss Sadie F. Hogan, nineteen, of No. 220 Beacon street, Somerville, was knocked down by an unknown man on Beacon street, Somerville, between Prentiss and Forests streets. She was on the way home with a girl companion when the man sprang at her. She says he tried to snatch her bag, but was prevented by the fact that she fell on it. Her friend shrieked for help and the man fled.

THE TRAVELER IN CONTEMPT

The Boston Traveler Company was found guilty of contempt of court to-day before Judge Sanderson for printing an untruthful story about the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, who is accused of the murder of Avis Linnell.

The complaint against the Traveler Company was made by District Attorney Pelletier. The story complained of was printed yesterday and had to do with the alleged condition and actions of Richeson in the Charles Street Jail.

When the case had been heard Judge Sanderson announced that he found the defendant guilty and that he would reserve action until a later date.

ARREST FOUR ON SWINDLING CHARGE

The federal authorities placed under arrest to-day four persons charged with conspiracy to defraud creditors of property worth several thousand dollars. Those under arrest are Raffaelo Siplone, a dealer in Italian groceries at Pepperell, Mass., and Nelson Carter, an employe of a hotel in that town. They were arrested here by Deputy United States Marshal Tighe and Bailiff Hicks. Two others are Mary Siplone and her son Tony, who were arrested at Lowell, N. H. The complaint, sworn to by George W. Reed, an attorney at Barristers' Hall, who is trustee in bankruptcy proceedings of Siplone, whose creditors are alleged to have been swindled.

MAETERLINCKS' ROMANCE TOLD

Madame Maeterlinck lays bare her soul in a most extraordinary interview with Miss Viola Rogers, the brilliant woman journalist, the wife of the Belgian poet tells how she won her husband. She tracked him down like a tiger tracks his prey, and compelled him to love her as she loved him, so she tells Miss Rogers.

The love story of Georgette Leblanc and Maurice Maeterlinck has never been told, Miss Rogers tells it for the first time in the Sunday AMERICAN.

The singer gives her views on love and marriage at length. She wants no children, she says, because her husband is the greatest child of all. It is a most extraordinary outpouring of the soul of an extraordinary woman.

Miss Rogers was there at the psychological moment, and the readers of the AMERICAN will benefit.

LYNN SUFFERS FROM PRESENT HIGH TIDES

The unusually high tides of the past few days succeeded to-day in backing up into the Lynn sewerage system, causing the flooding of a number of streets in the West Lynn section, and compelling passengers on the Narrow Gauge trains to climb the embankment of the Boston & Maine Railroad tracks at the foot of Commercial street, to reach their station. A part of the State boulevard where Commercial street enters is also under water. The water goes out with the tide. Boats were used on Commercial street at midnight last night to get to cars and relieve the horses and wagons. The Nahant & Lynn Street Railway Company, which operates between Lynn and Nahant, used its inward-bound rail to-day, the outward track being blocked with logs and other debris.

RICHESON'S CONFESSION

Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson has confessed that he murdered Avis Linnell.

The young clergyman, who was at the time he committed the shocking crime pastor of the Immanuel Baptist Church of Cambridge, wrote out his confession in the Charles street jail last Wednesday.

The confession was addressed to Attorneys John L. Lee, William A. Morse and Phillip R. Dunbar, his lawyer.

The confession was given out at 1 o'clock this afternoon in the office of Mr. Morse in the Equitable Building.

Richeson said that he was impelled to make the statement because he had been suffering "the tortures of the damned."

District Attorney Pelletier learned of the confession about the time it was given out to the newspapers. He made this statement:

"I have learned that Richeson has confessed. But I am preparing to go on with hi trial for murder a week from next Monday."

The confession in full as it was written by Richeson and given out by his attorneys is as follows:

THE CONFESSION.

Boston, January 3, 1912.

John L. Lee, Esq.,
William A. Morse, Esq.,
Philip R. Dunbar, Esq.

Gentlemen—Deeply penitent for my sin, and earnestly desiring, as far as in my power lies, to make atonement, I hereby confess that I am guilty of the offence of which I stand indicted.

I am moved to this course by no inducement o fself-benefit or leniency.

Heinous as is my crime, God has not wholly abandoned me, and my conscience and manhood, however depraved and blighted, will not admit of my still further wronging by a public trial her whose pure young life I have destroyed.

Under the lashings of remorse I have suffered and am suffering the tortures of the damned. In this I find a measure of comfort.

In my mental anguish I recognize that there is still by the mercy of the Master, some remnant of the divine spark of goodness still lingering with me.

I could wish to live only because within some prison's walls I might, in some small measure, redeem my sinful past, help some other despairing soul and, at last, find favor with my God.

You are instructed to deliver this to the District Attorney or to the judge of the cour.

Sincereiy yours,

CLARENCE V. T. RICHESON.

TREMENDOUS SENSATION IN THE CITY.

The confession of the Rev. C. V. T. Richeson, that he is guilty of the murder of Avis Linnell, caused a tremendous sensation throughout the city.

Corbett's Chat

His Lecture on "The Man Who Laughs" Has Made a Hit—Various Notes and Comments.

I wish to be personal to the extent of saying that churches and other societies who may wish my lecture on "The Man Who Laughs" can arrange with me for same on a percentage basis, thereby practically guaranteeing a profit for those under whose auspices I may appear. Communications sent to me care of the AMERICAN or at my home address, Providence, will receive prompt attention.

HIS BASSO IS ALL RIGHT.

It can be truly said of Bernard M. Wolf, of Wolf's, "My Clothier," corner of Hanover and Portland streets, that his word is as good as his bond. He doesn't know that I am writing this and might mine pencil if he saw it; still, what I say is the gospel truth. Mr. Wolf one of the squarest and most enterprising business men in Boston and his department store reflects his sterling, progressive principles.

PROVIDENCE FIRM BOOMING.

While some of the prominent business men of Providence may not consider business as "fair" the past year, a most encouraging report is made by the treasurer of the Reiner Drug Co., a rapidly growing industrial corporation of Providence. Mr. Reiner has reason to feel elated over the increased showing of his two stores, and himself the first year's business has passed giving the corporation a 10-year lease of another commodious store in Mathewson and Washington streets, now occupied by the publishing house where an up-to-date apothecary shop will be established. Mr. Reiner's motto "always give the public more than they desire than your competitor," meets with hearty approval.

NEW BEDFORD NOTES.

Snell & Simpson, manufacturers of superior biscuits, commenced business here in 1901, since which time a steady increase from the very beginning. Why? Because they have made good, giving the public a high-grade article, and by perfection in their line, always using the purest and best of ingredients. No substitutes with this bakery for fresh dairy butter and good eggs. And under these conditions and rules of the entire plant are all that could be desired. Their well-known "Butter Thins" were originated and named by Mr. Snell, who has had 30 years' experience and has originated hundreds of valuable formulas, many of which no other baker has been able to imitate. Many of the former clerks continued with Mr. Snell a number of years ago are being extensively employed today by some of the largest bakeries in this country. True, the Snell & Simpson goods cost a trifle extra but, then, the public gladly pays for good quality, and the cry "Buy all over the United States and Canada is for "more." This firm cannot supply the demand, notwithstanding the plant is running day and night, and 22,000 barrels of flour were used the past year. Recently the Snell & Simpson Biscuit Company has been incorporated for $100,000 to be enlarged, and then there will be things doing. Mr. Snell is figuring over the new company several hundred formulas which he originated and hereto has not as yet been introduced owing to lack of capacity and the fine way in which they carry take care of their already established goods.

One of the prominent financial institutions of New England is the First National Bank of New Bedford, which was founded in 1852, and organized as a national bank in 1864. Its resources as per report last month, are over $2,600,000. Thomas R. Tripp, an able financier and recently been elected president, succeeding Walter P. Winsor, deceased. Mr. Tripp is 71, and William A. Mackie, cashier, his tenancy on the board of directors succeeding by Mr. Winsor's death. Mr. Mackie has been associated with the bank since its April 25, 1869, when he started in as office boy, or messenger. To-day, Mr. Mackie is courteous and capable, is well known in financial circles, being a member of the executive committee of the Massachusetts Bankers' Association, and president and treasurer of the National Bank Cashiers' Association, of Massachusetts. He was clerk of the Common Council for 16 years, also as chairman of the Committee on Public Safety and for New Bedford, Mr. Mackie handled $1,700,000 in 1911 in a satisfactory manner.

The Browne Pharmacy is certainly a leader along progressive lines. This store has 12,000 square feet of floor space, a pharmacy which will seat 250, a distinct prescription department with six registered pharmacists. Its toilet goods section is a marvel. The handsome soda fountain, just re-arranged, would be 50 feet long and over 150 delicious drinks are dispensed, many of which were originated by Mr. Browne, proprietor. A branch is at Fairhaven, Mass.

For fresh ground coffee, choice tea and pure chocolate, patronize the Lorraine Coffee Co. No premiums, no stamps, just the genuine article at low prices. Her chocolate and coffee, four cents a cupful.

You get good service, and food that is delectable, both to behold and taste, when you patronize Regier's cafe, Phillip Regier, proprietor. Make a note of this, and act accordingly.

ENTERPRISING AND POPULAR.

At the inviting, well-stocked Crown Drug Store, Arcific, R. I., a specialty is made of prescriptions. The proprietor, Dr. J. F. Achampaugh, has a large patronage. He was on Governor Higgins's personal staff and is very popular.

NEWPORT JOTTINGS.

The Newport National Bank is one of Rhode Island's solid and old-established financial institutions, was founded in 1851, and its resources to-day are over $637,000. It extends to customers every accommodation consistent with sound business methods. President George W. Sherman is highly esteemed, as is Cashier H. C. Stevens, Jr., affable and efficient, has been connected with this bank 30 years.

Commercial travelers as well as other patrons of the City-by-the-Sea will be glad to learn that Messrs. Dwyer & Purcell, proprietors of the Ferry House, have just taken another three years' lease of this popular hostelry, which is conducted on both the American and European plans. This means that guests will get good food, comfortable rooms, and the glad hand.

W. H. Mowrey, the photographer, is executing artistic work, both as to quality and finish, and those who appreciate high grade photos will do well to call at his centrally-located studio.

PHELPS LEAVES THE DEATH CELL

Silas N. Phelps, the condemned murderer, now awaiting execution at the State Prison in Charlestown, was removed from the death cell adjoining the execution chamber to a cell in "Cherry Hill," a section of the prison adjoining the one occupied by Jesse Pomeroy.

Warden Bridges, Deputy Warden Allen and four prison guards took Phelps from his cell. They walked him through the prison proper, across the yard to "Cherry Hill." The change was made shortly before the noon hour, when nearly all the prisoners were busy in the shops.

Phelps will be kept in Cherry Hill until some action is taken by the Governor's new council. If they refuse commutation or a further reprieve, the condemned man will be taken back to the death cell, on January 20. That is the date set by the old council.

He has completely recovered from the attack of nervous prostration from which he was suffering on Friday. This attack was brought on by the suspense due to the action of the old council and the letters he received from his wife and six children at Munroe Bridge stating that all was not well.

He has received no official notification regarding the refusal of Justice Holmes of the Supreme Court to grant him a new hearing on the writ of error presented to that justice.

All his hopes are now centred on the action of the new Council. He will then to act every hope is gone. He will then be electrocuted some time after January 20, between the hours of midnight and sunrise. He was brought to the State Prison from the Greenfield Jail on December 22, and the sentence of death was to be carried out the week of January 21, but action was delayed, owing to the writ of error that was presented to the United States Supreme Court.

FIND OIL SPRINKLED OVER STORE FLOOR

The Brookline police are searching for the persons who entered the store of William J. Papoulaes, a baker, at No. 1, Harvard square, Brookline, and sprinkled kerosene upon the floor and barrels. One of Papoulaes' employes detected the odor of kerosene coming from the shipping room in the rear of the store. He found the rear door open and a short distance away discovered a can containing kerosene oil cut partially open. The oil had been sprinkled on the floor, in two barrels containing starch paper, and on several crates of bananas, oil had also been poured.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Incubators of Disease

The dangers of infection from breathing the dust and germs that are carried into the schoolroom by the shoes of hundreds of children have been a source of no little anxiety to the health authorities. Microbes of all sorts of infectious diseases find their way into the nasal passages and bronchial tubes of the pupils with the very air they breathe.

Slight coughs or inflamed throats, if not given prompt attention often develop into serious maladies, and tuberculosis finds a ready breeding place upon the sensitive membranes of the children's lungs.

Parents should never neglect the slightest symptoms of a cold in their children. A few drops of virgin oil of pine on a lump of sugar or in connection with a mixture of glycerine and whiskey is said by health authorities to be one of the most certain cures for troubles of this character and a good means of preventing the development of disease germs.

The genuine virgin oil of pine is prepared only in the laboratories of the Leach Chemical Co., Cincinnati, O., who guarantee its freshness and purity; it can be secured at any drug store in half-ounce vials, the most convenient size for home use.

RICHESON CONFESSES KILLING MISS LINNELL

his former congregation in Cambridge, the news could hardly be credited.

None of the members of the Edmands family would comment upon the confession.

No more pathetic figure remains than that of Violet Edmands, to whom Richeson was engaged to be married. She and her family have stood by Richeson steadfastly. Even to-day search has been made for Miss Edmands in an effort to find if she would come to Boston to testify at the trial. Miss Edmands left Boston soon after Richeson's arrest. She has been reported from time to time at Lakewood, N. H.; Wahington, D. C., and Hastings, N. Y., where she was said to be with relatives.

The confession of the handsome, brilliant young Virginia clergyman that he poisoned Avis Linnell makes one of the most startling climaxes that ever occurred in a great national murder mystery.

The whole country was absorbed in the developments of this remarkable crime. The country was probably about equally divided as to the guilt or innocence of the clergyman.

Most of his former church members were confident that he had been accused wrongly and felt satisfied that a trial of the case would establish his innocence.

His confession will be a shock to all those who have believed in his innocence.

The shock will be of especial severity to Miss Violet Edmands, the fiance of Richeson and the woman to whom he was to have been married on October 31 last, ten days after he poisoned Avis Linnell.

Miss Edmands has been missing from her home in Boston for several weeks and the District Attorney's office has been unable to locate her. The latest reports as to the whereabouts of the young woman were that she was visiting friends in the vicinity of Yonkers, N. Y., but had left there for some unknown destination.

Luncheon on Fatal Day.

The father of Miss Edmands, M. Grant Edmands, has been one of the most steadfast friends of the accused clergyman. Mr. Edmands is a wealthy man, it was to his home that Richeson went shortly after he committed the crime.

In the light of Richeson's confession made public to-day, it is believed that the call that Avis Linnell took luncheon with him on the afternoon of October 20. Miss Linnell told some of her friends at the Young Women's Christian Association building that she had been out to luncheon with her fiance, and they understood it, of course, to be Richeson.

Swallowed Poison in Bathroom.

Immediately after giving Miss Linnell the fatal portion of poison on October 20—for Richeson has confessed that he is guilty as charged in the indictment—he went to the home of his fiance, Miss Edmands, in Brookline.

Avis Linnell went to her room in the Young Women's Christian Association building after she had been out with Richeson on Saturday afternoon. She went to the bathroom shortly before 7 o'clock that evening, and placing her feet in hot water swallowed in a glass of water the fatal dose of cyanide of potassium.

Almost Instant Death.

The effect on the girl was almost instantaneous. She fell back in her chair with a moan. When she was discovered she was semi-conscious and never was able to speak a word.

It was thought at first that it was a case of suicide. The reason for the supposed suicide was that she had learned that Richeson had jilted her for Miss Edmands, a wealthier girl.

That was the way the case stood on that Saturday night. Miss Edmands, one of the young women at the Association building, got Richeson on the telephone about 9 o'clock Saturday night. He was told that Avis Linnell was dead and that he was wanted at the building. Miss Hanscomb said that she was virtually ordered by the clergyman for calling him up. He denied that he had chosen to luncheon with her that day.

Miss Edmand's Whereabouts.

Edward W. Henry, editor of the Hastings News, printed yesterday that Miss Edmands was there and was being treated by a local physician for nervousness. When asked about it to-day he said:

"I am satisfied that Miss Edmands is not here now. If she was here, she is gone. I have investigated the matter thoroughly, and as far as I know she has gone, I feel certain that she is not here. She is not with the Readers or the Hapgoods, distant relatives of hers, and they can throw no light on her movements. I doubt if she has been here lately."

Dr. Howard R. Lothrop, who has been in attendance upon Richeson since the first day he inflicted wounds upon himself, said to-day after having seen him:

"Richeson is in fine condition. He is better than at any time I have seen him heretofore."

Physician at Court House.

Dr. Mary Hobart called at the District Attorney's office to-day and made arrangements to see him later. Dr. Hobart is the physician who was summoned to the Young Women's Christian Association building the evening Avis Linnell was found dying in the bath room. Dr. Hobart did what she could for the girl, but was unable to save her.

Three young women, believed to be connected with the Young Women's Christian Association, went to the court house to-day and were shown into the District Attorney's office. It was believed that they were prosecution witnesses in the Richeson case and the District Attorney wished to go over their testimony with them.

Relatives of Miss Edmands in and about Yonkers deny that Miss Edmands is with them. Mrs. Rudolph Reesler, the wife of the superintendent of the New York Orphan Asylum at Yonkers, is a cousin of Miss Edmands, and it was thought the missing girl was at the Reesler residence. This was denied.

A taxicab drew up to the curb just below the New York Orphan Asylum. A reporter was at the door of the car as the occupant alighted.

"Are you Miss Violet Edmands?" asked the reporter.

"Yes. Are you from the asylum?" was her reply.

The inquisitor said he was not and asked:

"Do you know District Attorney Pelletier of Boston is anxious about you?"

"No, why should I know?" replied the girl.

"Well, aren't you going to be at Mr. Richeson's trial?"

She dismissed further questions, saying: "Please do not talk of Mr. Richeson; I'd rather not."

COLDEST DAY OF THE WINTER

forty-eight miles—some gale. It was thirty-four miles at Nantucket early to-day.

The cold wave tied up traffic on the Western Division of the Boston & Maine to-day, so that commuters all the way from Reading to the North Station were obliged to ride on the steps of the cars, and the conductor of Train No. 124 was unable to collect the tickets owing to the large number of passengers which packed the cars.

Rough on Malden Passengers

Train No. 700, which leaves Reading at 7:26 a. m. could not get up steam enough to move a foot. Steam was finally started in the locomotive of train No. 124, which leaves Reading at 7:43. This train was late, however, and was forced to run slowly all the way into the city in order that passengers on the several later trains could get aboard. The conductor of this train found it impossible to force his way through the crowd in the cars when it got the Wyoming. Passengers were on the platforms and even hanging on to the steps, in trolley fashion. Every passenger on the crowded cars suffered from the cold as the doors were kept open by the big crowd.

Although the train stopped at Malden, passengers who were to alight there found it impossible to do so and were brought to Boston with the rest of the freezing passengers. When the big train of nine coaches reached the North station, trains of men handling other trains looked on in wonder. Many of them said it was the first time they had ever seen passengers getting up to the handles and steps of trains. There were quite a number of frostbitten ears this morning on this run.

WHY RICHESON MUTILATED HIMSELF.

Mr. Clement L. Pollock, the gifted newspaper writer, has prepared the most unusual article yet printed about this sensational case. It will appear exclusively in to-morrow's

SUNDAY AMERICAN.

$11,000 FIRE IN SALEM FACTORY

Eleven thousand dollars' damage resulted from a fire in the refinishing factory of the Odell-Verga Leather Company on Derby street, for which a second alarm was sounded. Of the loss about $10,000 was on stock. The fire started in the basement about the buffing machine, and is supposed to have been due to spontaneous combustion. The blaze was confined to that floor.

NORMAN MACK CALLS ON TAFT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Norman E. Mack, chairman of the Democratic national committee, called on President Taft to-day and personally informed him that a Democrat would occupy the White House beginning March 4, 1913.

Mr. Mack spent only a few minutes with the President, having called merely to pay his respects.

Gossip to-day was to the effect that Thomas Taggart of Indiana is to be made chairman of the committee on arrangements for the next convention. This means a fight for the so-called progressive wing of the party and the committee may be expected to fight the selection of the Indiana man. Taggart is said to be a supporter of Judson Harmon, and this will bring down upon his head the combined opposition of the Wilson, Clarke, Bryan and Underwood factions in the committee.

With no idea of compromise, John J. Vertrees of Nashville, one of the contestants for the Tennessee seat in the National Democratic Committee, arrived here to-day. With him are Nathan Baxter, Jr., Speaker of the State Senate; former Governor Reuben McMillan and Major W. O. Vertrees, chairman of the State Democratic Committee.

Senator Taylor of Tennessee, who will conduct the fight of Mr. Vertrees against H. E. Hamtramck, the other claimant, conferred with the Vertrees forces immediately after they arrived here.

DOZEN DRIVEN OUT BY FLAMES

A dozen persons were driven from their homes into the biting cold of the street, when fire completely destroyed the frame dwelling house of Daniel Little on Felton court at Cliftondale and spread to three adjacent houses. Mr. Little carried his wife and children from the burning house.

The entire fire-fighting apparatus of the town responded to the alarm. The firemen were greatly handicapped by the below-zero weather and the high wind added to the difficulty of their efforts. They worked like Trojans to keep the fire from spreading. Sparks blown by the strong wind, started incipient fires on the roofs of nearby houses, but these were quickly extinguished.

When the firemen arrived on the scene, the Little dwelling was enveloped in flames. Realizing the futility of checking the flames in this dwelling, the fire-fighters concentrated their efforts on saving the surrounding buildings.

Mrs. Chapin, Who Says Boston Is Living on the Fame of Ancestors

Mrs. Chapin, who is in demand as a lecturer, says some one should arouse Back Bay people to meet needs of the living present and not dwell on the achievements of their ancestors.

By MARTHA WINTHROP.

Boston people are truly sleeping.

They are talking of what "dear father" did, and these young men who do talk, are too well endowed with money.

Boston is taking a back seat, and Boston is living too much upon the past.

Back Bay people are skipping around with their eyes sealed.

They are going around automatically.

Why don't the Back Bay people stamp on the ground and say that they are awake?

In these lively terms, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth T. Chapin of the Back Bay district is trying to awaken the people of Boston to a new life. Just now she is giving Sunday talks in the Berkely Theatre, No. 20 East Forty-fourth street, New York, upon the topic, "How to Keep Happy."

The New York people are very much interested in Boston and they are constantly telling her that Boston is asleep.

For a long time she has resented that criticism. But it has been said so often to her, backed by the recital of many recent events in Boston, that she is convinced of its truth, and will spend next month, enter into a campaign in this city to get Back Bay people away from their traditions and put them down on plain earth. Her intention is to get somebody satisfied with his benefit received, send me One Dollar. If not, they cost you nothing. I take your word. Address Magic Foot Draft Co., MH1, Office Bldg., Jackson, Mich. Send no money—just the coupon. Write today—now.

Dreaming, Just Dreaming.

New York people have been hearing her upon this topic and told her to give her palatable dose to her own Bostonians. So she is going to do this in the near future.

When seen at her residence, No. 158 Newbury street, she was very much disturbed at the apathy of Bostonians, and said that when she came back from her engagements in New York next week, she would publicly announce what she finds Boston people, so as to keep them awake.

"I'm a thousand times more interested in making Beautiful Bostonians than in the 1915 movement of making a Beautiful Boston," is the crisp way that Mrs. Chapin answered the question whether she thought that Boston people were sleepy.

"Boston people are truly sleeping. They are dreaming of what their dear fathers and grandfathers did. Now this is so good of them, but you know, just as well as I know, that this will not do.

"What dear father did ought not to be the daily interest of the well endowed moneyed son or daughter. This clinging to the past and trying to make your present out of it is one of the most irritating and vexing things on the Back Bay to-day.

Traditions Overworked.

"You will meet this well-groomed young man or this well-gowned young woman, perfectly charming in more ways than one, sitting down with you and chatting over many things and then they will begin to talk about how clever their father was and sound his praises, when these young men and young women should be making their own way in life and not depending upon their ancestors. Let's forever cease talk about the past, and let us lend some attention to this active present.

"Boston is taking a back seat and we are living too much on traditions.

"I'll tell you exactly what they remind me of. Go into the Public Library and you'll see there Abbey's picture of Sir Galahad in search of the Holy Grail. He comes into a hall where the people are forever dying or dead.

"This is just exactly like some people in Boston.

"You see these Back Bay people skipping all round us with their eyes sealed up with indifference, knowing nothing of the earth or of man or woman, going automatically to their office and saying that they are happy and happy one is not happy. I suppose, surely at least from no sense of happiness or unhappiness unless you're dead you have a tooth that tingles. Is not all this like a bad dream?

"Why don't the people on the Back Bay stamp their feet upon the ground and say they are awake.

Need to Be Awakened.

"There is a moon rising in the East and there is a person with his heart broken and still glad and conscious of the world's glory up to the point of pain, and behold they have forgotten all this.

"In the language of Robert Louis Stevenson, 'I should like to kick them into consciousness, for damp ginger bread puppets as they are.'

"How are they to be aroused? They want some trustful voice that can arouse them to possibilities and powers within them.

"Do you want to be happy? Love everybody. Try to get the best out of yourself and be active without haste.

"I repeat, do you want to be happy? Work for the betterment of mankind. Why, you can do this in so many ways. You can be happy all the time and need not depend upon the past or its traditions. Eliminate these things in your nature that retard your growth and development into a better situation.

Road to Happiness.

"Back Bay people could be aroused to a different sort of life than they are now living, something out of this logy atmosphere that they find themselves in. They can live the constructive life, be well, happy, cheerful and prosperous, but not by selling what their ancestors are doing. Oh, no; this is not all. Let us all recover from this revelry and let us be up and doing something for others. Some of them no doubt are, and this service to others, they will bring greater happiness all around them."

SCOTTI HAS NEW GARB FOR TONIO

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Antonio Scotti played Tonio in "Pagliacci" last night in a costume which he must have borrowed from Low Dockstader. He wore an enormous black dress coat, a collar that covered his ears and a hideous tie. Gone was the clown's garb of other days, when Scotti was the greatest of all buffoons and trusted himself to voice alone.

He is still a fine baritone, however, and a better actor. His Tonio was a low, vicious character, a detestable person capable of all the composer charged up to him. He delivered the prologue before the curtain, with fine dramatic sense, and was by all odds the most satisfying figure in the little opera.

Zenatello appeared as Pagliacci. It is not a role which suits him as well as Othello or Radames. Canio is a dramatic part to be sure, but it needs a richer, more beautiful voice than the virile organ of Zenatello. Dramatically, as usual, he was very effective.

Carmen Melis is not a good Nedda. I think it is the worst thing she does. Her voice is too big for this little play actress with her dainty melodies and frail disposition.

Barrera as Silvio does not shine, and Gilocone as Beppe acts admirably and sings abominably. The chorus can always be depended upon, and last night was no exception. Montanoli is also sure to work up a fiery and spirited performance, and did not fail to do so.

Isadora Galli is wonderfully graceful and agile, Miss Paporelli is charming as Franzi, and the others in the cast are excellent, while the chorus dancing is very inspiring. Mr. Goodrich conducts the whole most delightfully.

KENT ACCIDENT STIRS PROTEST

WINDSOR, Vt., Jan. 6.—The parting of the rope at the execution of Elroy Kent has given impetus to the demand for the abolishment of the death penalty. The rope that broke was the same one that on December 8, 1905, stretched and allowed Mrs. Mary M. Rogers to fall to the floor, it was stated here. That the Kent accident, following the previous trouble, will sound a death knell to legal executions in Vermont, at least by the use of the gallows, is the opinion expressed by many persons to-day.

Governor John A. Mead, when interviewed at Rutland, declined to make any statement upon the matter in which the execution of Kent was carried out.

"The affair has been very unpleasant for me," said the Governor. "I have received letters from all parts of the State, some asking for commutation of the death sentence to life imprisonment and many urging that the full penalty of the law be exacted.

"I being simply a part of the executive branch, have felt that it was not proper for me to interfere with the other departments. In this case my stand was that of non-interference unless some new evidence was discovered. I have realized for many days the tremendous responsibility of my position in this case and have sought information both from all sources in my endeavor to act justly to all parties and interests.

"An autopsy was performed upon Kent's body by Dr. H. H. Stone of Burlington, the State pathologist, assisted by Dr. C. E. Dalton. Three other physicians witnessed the autopsy. It was found that Kent was in good physical condition, and there was nothing abnormal about him. The brain was removed and taken to Burlington.

Three hours after Kent had been pronounced dead his body was lowered into a grave in the lot owned by the prison in the Auburnee cemetery. None of his relatives were present. At the grave the prison chaplain read a short prayer.

WARNS MODERN GIRL STUDENTS

By SYBIL WARNE.

Educators all over the country are discussing what President Mary E. Woolley of Mt. Holyoke College said to the students in the chapel of that institution about the strain which the modern college life places upon the student.

There is much waste of energy in the life of the woman student. The way that some students pursue their studies is to show that they are nothing more than puffing locomotives heading for whatever work they do they appear to do it under a strain. Too much nerve power is being used up, she thinks, and the older we grow the more we realize this.

To remedy this tendency in young women to carry out affairs too minutely, she urges that every young woman should be careful in how she manages the details of her responsibilities.

Her remarks were based upon Whittier's lines:

"Take from our souls the strain and stress,
And let our ordered lives confess
The beauty of the peace."

Here are her views as to the modern girl student:

"Especially at this time of the year do we need to think of the prayer expressed in Whittier's hymn. In thinking about this service I tried to realize what would be the difference in our college community if that prayer were fulfilled. What would be the difference in the atmosphere? What would be the difference in our capacity for work?

"What would be the difference in our influence for good, both among ourselves and in wider circles? It seems strange that we as college women and as Christian women, cannot realize what that prayer both in collective and individual life means. It does not mean taking away activity, earnest purpose, lofty and right ambition.

"Have you ever waited at the station for an express train to take you to the West, South or East, seen the smoke in the distance and thought your train was about to come, then, as it drew nearer, realized that it was not the one you were waiting for? How did you know? It was because the locomotive coming in with such a rattle and puffing and shrieking was not the kind to take you to Chicago in twenty-four hours.

"Have you also stood talking at the station and hardly realized an express was approaching until it was there, so quietly and with such a sense of power did it come? The kind of a locomotive that carries you swiftly hundreds of miles, the kind that accomplishes something for the country, cannot waste energy.

"Now I think the analogy between that and our human life is closer than we are sometimes inclined to think. There is not a person who is not sometimes like the little puffing engine. But having made the confession, let us determine that those times shall be few and far between, and eventually disappear altogether.

"We are using and losing energy by our strain and stress, even when we explain over the difficulties in our work, we are using up valuable nerve power. The older we grow, the more we realize this. We cannot afford to waste our energy if we wish to accomplish anything.

"The examination period may be called more rightly than any other the period of 'strain and stress,' but it need not be one.

"The hymn goes on to say,

"'And let our ordered lives confess
The beauty of Thy peace.'

"I think the Quaker poet used these words advisedly. We cannot be sure that the plan of our daily living will not be interfered with, but it will be less interfered with in college than elsewhere.

BOOKS AWARDED ON COUPON PLAN

To-day brought the first distribution of books under the AMERICAN'S latest and best coupon offer. The books include an atlas, encyclopedia and United States history, all new, up-to-date and of highest grade.

The first distribution came to-day because this was the seventh day from the printing of the first coupon last Sunday. Seven coupons of consecutive dates form a set. With a set of coupons and small sums of cash in addition the books are yours. If you have not begun clipping the book coupons, do so now.

It would also be well to see the advertisement and reading matter calling attention to this big offer in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

One volume is the New Census Atlas of the World, a splendid volume, containing not only new maps but, what the ordinary atlas does not have, a quantity of authentic text.

Two other books are in this new offer. One is Croscup's United States History, with synchronic charts, maps and statistical diagrams on the plan of "history made visible." The development of the country is spread before you on a beautiful colored chart, with tables in text to accompany. It is right up to date. It includes President Taft's administration, even up to 1911.

The third book in this new offer is the Modern Universal Encyclopedia, a 625-page volume, bound in limp leather and weighing only thirty ounces, so nicely is it made, but it contains over 2,500 pictures and treats over 10,000 subjects. It is an education that can be carried in a child's hand.

CITIZENS' MUNICIPAL LEAGUE.
By CHARLES A. DOUTY, Exe. Sec'y. 19 Thetford Avenue, Boston.

BIG DEMOCRATIC RALLY TO-NIGHT

The Democrats will hold a big rally in Faneuil Hall to-night. Speakers will include Congressmen Murray Peters and Curley and the candidates for the City Council and School Committee. Mrs. Anna T. Steinmetz and Mrs. Christina Page will speak on School Committee affairs. A band will furnish music. There will also be rallies in International Hall, at No. 67 Warren street, Roxbury; the Municipal Gymnasium, Tyler street, and in Minton Hall, Ward 22.

Aided by students from Boston University, the Democratic City Committee has completed the task of sending out 200,000 pieces of mail matter. The men worked under the direction of Jerome A. Shapleigh and volunteered their services to assist one of their instructors, Owen A. Cunningham, candidate for the City Council.

Mrs. Susan W. FitzGerald, candidate for School Committee, speaks at a rally of the School Voters' League in Faneuil Hall this noon to-day. Miss Alice Stone Blackwell presides.

Mrs. FitzGerald said that some of her opponents have violated the election laws in an effort to defeat her. She showed a copy of an anonymous circular, which, she said, was sent to schoolmasters. The circular, she said, urged the assessors to defeat her and to re-elect candidates Lee and Brock.

Candidates of the Democratic City Committee for City Council and School Committee toured through East Boston, Charlestown and South Boston. Edward D. Collins said: "If the Finance Commission is really sincere in its efforts to try and find city employes doing election work on the city's time they need go no further than their own department. George A. O. Ernst is openly working day and night for the success of the Public School Association and the Citizens' Municipal League ticket and he is drawing $5,000 per year for doing this uplift work."

Owen A. Cunningham said: "It is interesting to note who signs the appeal for funds for the Good Government Association. Laurence Minot, the millionaire who is interested in every land deal of any size, pleads for the money."

Councilor Thomas J. Kenny at a meeting of the Jamaica Plain Citizens' Association in Eliot Hall, said: "My opponents, Messrs. Collins and Cunningham, in this campaign, finding nothing to criticise in my votes and actions in the City Council, have raised a cry that I am a tax dodger. This is an untruth, and the man who make the statement know it. I have paid each year each and every tax which has been assessed upon me, whether it was a poll tax, an income tax, or a real estate tax, and I have never sought or obtained exemption from any tax."

PERHAPS YOU REMEMBER THE COLONEL JOHN JACOB ASTOR WEDDING. Folks are recalling it now because Katherine Force, Colonel Astor's pretty sister-in-law, is said to be comforting the "poorest" young men in New York society. Mrs. Force, having organized such a brilliant matrimonial coup for one daughter, is said to be not a bit pleased with the newest love affair. There will be a page about it in the Sunday AMERICAN, with some striking pictures.

QUINCY SAYS HE IS INNOCENT

Josiah Quincy, former mayor and now a transit commissioner, to-day at his Boston office announced that he will fight the charges made against him in the indictment handed down by the Federal Grand Jury in New York.

Former Mayor Quincy, with Julian Hawthorne, son of the famous novelist, and three other men were held for the Federal government in New York on indictments charging them with using the mails to defraud investors by the sale of mining stocks.

The other three men held are Albert Freeman, a well-known stock promoter; John McKinnon, secretary and treasurer of the Hawthorne Mining Company, and Dr. William J. Morton, a nerve specialist, with offices at No. 10 East Twenty-eighth street.

Mr. Quincy declares he is innocent of any wrong-doing. He said:

"I am convinced that the indictments made public in New York against myself and others, which are based upon a statute of extraordinary scope and vagueness, are based upon misapprehensions which can be soon cleared up in court.

"The fair-minded public will realize that it is impossible for those interested in such a situation to present their defence in advance or to correct the tissue of misstatements which have been published.

"I will only add that my own connection with the Hawthorne companies, as will appear in due time, has been wholly in the relation of counsel, and that I have not been interested in any other matters. The impression created that these companies have no valuable assets is wholly unwarranted."

Don't miss Ella Wheeler Wilcox's special article on the Richeson case, to be printed exclusively in to-morrow's AMERICAN.

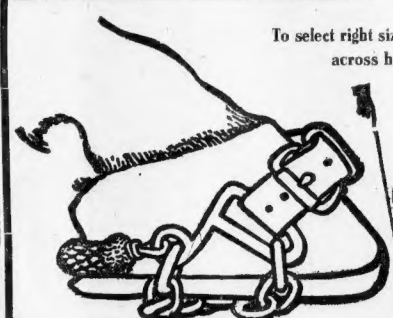
NO EXCUSE FOR HORSES SLIPPING

Put the Kinnell Chain Shoe on Your Horses; Prevent Suffering and Loss

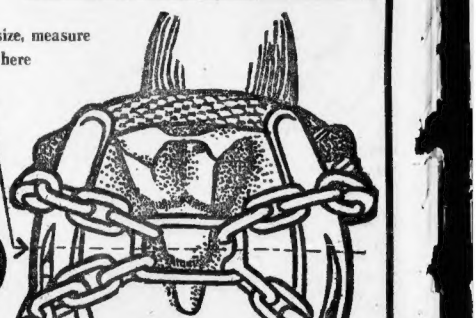
The icy streets prevent hauling loads, break the horses' legs, cause innumerable falls, delay, suffering and financial loss.

How the Kinnell Chain Shoe Is Fastened to the Hoof

The Bottom of the Horse's Foot, with Chain, Making Slipping Impossible



To select right size, measure across here



Here are pictures showing how the Kinnell Chain Shoe works on the horse's foot and makes slipping absolutely impossible, even on icy asphalt. These shoes cost only a dollar apiece. They can be put on in one minute.

It is a crime to allow horses to slip and suffer in icy, snowy weather, when this absolutely perfect chain shoe makes the suffering and the loss unnecessary.

These are the wonderful Chain Overshoes, which are not only approved by the Humane Societies in New York City but they are buying and distributing them free this Winter.

Drivers should insist upon their employers supplying it to them.

The shoes can be kept in the wagon or truck ready for immediate use.

The chain surface of the shoe acts like the non-skid chain on the automobile and makes it impossible for the horse to slip.

After one trial you will never travel without a set.

No horse need slip if this shoe is used.

MAIL ORDERS receive special attention. Just give measurement across widest part of bottom of hoof, enclose $1 for each shoe, and we will send correct size.

M FOR MINCE; P IS FOR PIE

M. P. has a deeper significance than its use behind the names of distinguished Britishers.

M stands for Mince.

P stands for Pie.

M. P., Mince Pie—that's what it means when the housewives of New England talk about it since the AMERICAN started its great M. P. contest.

The mince pie recipes are coming along on every mail, and if you haven't written the Mince Pie Editor, now is the time to get busy and send in that recipe of yours. If you think you make good M. P., send your recipes along. They're all interesting.

The AMERICAN offers one prize of $5 for the very best recipe submitted and five other prizes of $1 each. Address all recipes to the Mince Pie Editor, Boston AMERICAN, Boston, Mass.

Here are a few of the recipes selected at random:

One-half peck apples, 2 pounds lean beef stewed and chopped fine, 1 pound beef suet chopped fine, 1 pound currants, 1 pound seedless raisins, 1 pound sultana raisins, 1 pound mixed orange and lemon candied peel, 2 pounds white sugar, juice of 2 lemons, 1 teaspoon of cassia, mace and cloves, 1 teaspoon salt. The pie crust to be made the same as for apple pie.

Take the lard and rub into the flour until it is a smooth paste. Half cup of ice water, the beaten white of one egg. Mix to a very stiff dough. Roll out to a thin sheet, then spread one-half the butter sprinkle with flour, roll up closely in a long roll like a double scroll, double up the ends toward the centre, flatten and roll. FAT VANISHES
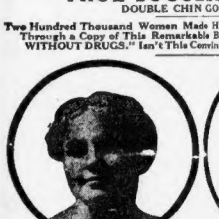
ONE POUND A DAY
BY NEW DRUGLESS METHOD
TRUE SUCCESS AT LAST
DOUBLE CHIN GOES QUICK

Two Hundred Thousand Women Made Happy With This New Knowledge Through a Copy of This Remarkable Book, "WEIGHT REDUCTION WITHOUT DRUGS." Isn't This Convincing Evidence as to Its Value?



SEE ME HERE!
I SHOCKED AS FAT AS AN OX BEFORE I REDUCED MY FAT

HERE I AM AFTER REDUCING 57 LBS. IN FIVE WEEKS, WITH MY HARMLESS HOME TREATMENT

THE JOY OF LIVING IS THE HERITAGE OF THE LEAN, I WAS STOUT—AND I KNOW

My friends were charitable and they called it obesity; others referred to me as being STOUT, but I know it was just plain bulky weight. I was miserable—fat, too, are equally miserable if you are too stout.

To reduce your weight you must find the cause, you must get at the very reason.

I FOUND THE CAUSE—THE REST WAS EASY

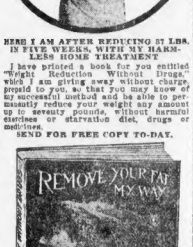
Before I succeeded, I tried everything within reason and some things beyond reason.

It was maddening—disgusting.

All I had to do was to remove the cause, and I never knew or cared how. I by my simple method, without drugs, medicine, harmful exercises or starvation diet, I reduced my weight 37 pounds in five weeks, and guarantee that I can do the same for you. I do not use medicine of any kind or worthless stuff to rub on the body, but a simple home treatment that a child can use it without harm. Through this marvelous combination of home treatment I succeeded because I had found the right cause. I was then at the very summit of Fleu's Peak with ease, I could eat as I like until I had taken off 37 pounds of my ponderous weight.

If you are interested in your own happiness and health and figure, you will permit me to tell you how to reduce your weight. Natural Way.

It is astonishing the thousands of grateful letters I am receiving. J. A. Schaelle, Box 422, Great Bend, Kansas, writes that he lost fifty pounds with my harmless treatment. W. L. Schmits, Montevideo, Minnesota, lost thirty pounds in thirty days. Mamie McNelly, Dasinge, Missouri, writes that she lost sixty-five pounds with this new method, and I can send you thousands of names of satisfied customers who have given me permission to use their names. I never publish any name without written permission.



I WILL SEND THIS BOOK TO YOU AT MY EXPENSE

Send for my book, "Weight Reduction Without Drugs." It is free for the asking, and I will be glad to send it to you, postage prepaid.

I have found that the best way to know happiness is to give it.

Sincerely your friend,
MARJORIE HAMILTON,
Suite 2977, Central Bank Building, Denver, Col.

Every reader of this paper, who has the slightest interest in Miss Hamilton's remarkable new treatment, should write her promptly for all she agrees to send free, for as she has said, her book, "Weight Reduction Without Drugs," is entirely free; you have everything to gain and nothing to lose, but be sure to remember and send for it. If you wish, send a two-cent stamp to help pay postage.

FIGHT FOR LIFE OF RUTH OLNEY

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 6.—The illness of Ruth Olney, the nineteen-year-old girl who attempted suicide last Tuesday by shooting herself in the right breast, is approaching a critical stage. Physicians are striving to ward off pneumonia, which now threatens.

The girl is conscious part of the time, but fails to gain strength. The physicians do not yet dare to operate on her to extract the bullet, which is still in her back.

It has been discovered that the bullet pierced both lungs instead of the right one alone. The girl aimed at her right breast. The bullet went through both sides of the right lung, then through the left lung and thence into her back, where it lodged. With both lungs pierced the girl is in no condition to ward off pneumonia.

Miss Olney, in her conscious moments, steadfastly refuses to discuss her motives for shooting herself. When she heard that the name of a man with whom she is said to be very friendly was about to be revealed, she said:

"If my friend's name is published I will kill myself next time. I will make a good job of it."

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

Early yesterday morning the 1½ ton Decatur truck, loaded with "Polarine," left the service depot of the Decatur Company in Cambridge bound for the New York show. The weather conditions at that time were hardly what might be termed propitious for the starting of such an undertaking, but Manager Hall is being confident of the ability of his truck, had no hesitancy whatsoever in making the start, and, escorted by half a dozen Decatur trucks which are now in service with Boston merchants, came across Harvard Bridge to Beacon street and headed towards Worcester.

Worcester was reached without difficulty, the truck taking its load up the heavy grades with remarkable ease, reaching the heart of the commonwealth in comparatively short time.

After a stop at Worcester, the truck made its way to Springfield, where it arrived early in the evening, the trip being decidedly successful, considering everything.

No mechanical or tire trouble was experienced and the average speed per hour for the run of 144 miles was twelve miles.

Today the truck will make the morning run from Springfield to Hartford, remain there until tomorrow, when the trip for New York will be started.

President H. B. Pruden of the Kissel Kar New England Branch, a Wisconsin corporation, announces that his company has no connection whatsoever with the Kissel Kar Co., which is now in the hands of a receiver.

The present Kissel Kar Company is a direct branch of the home factory, while the company which is now in the hands of a receiver is the one in which George W. Coleman, formerly bookkeeper in the National Bank of Cambridge and now sojourning at Greenfield, was an officer, and none of those interested in that company has any connections with the Kissel Kar Branch located at the Motor Mart.

* * *

A meeting of the board of directors of the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association was held at the Hotel Lenox and much business relating to the forthcoming show was disposed of. Secretary Campbell reported that the applications for space for the Boston show were greater in excess of that of former years, and although this year the number of shows will be held, there is still a scarcity of space.

* * *

There will be features at the Twelfth National Automobile show which opens tonight at the Madison Square Garden that will surpass those of the past. Particularly is this true of the decorations, and if splendor makes greatness, here will be seen the greatest motor car exhibition ever held to mark an epoch in the motoring industry that has developed to immense proportions in a few years.

As a society event and as a spectacle, the show promises to eclipse any former affair of the sort ever held in America.

Special days have been designated for the Part One period of the show. Monday will be known as Theatrical Day; Tuesday and Thursday as Society Days; on which doubtless admission will be charged; Wednesday will be Automobile Day, and Friday will be Army and Navy Day.

RAICEVICH ON TRAIL OF GOTCH

Aleksani Raicevich, the giant Italian wrestler, is anxiously awaiting a reply from Frank Gotch for a match for the world's championship following his rather easy victory over Iron Romanoff in two straight falls.

In the other matches Cracker Jack Butler of Brockton defeated an Irish of Boston in two straight falls, and Nogart, the Boer, lost to Cyclone Burns in a handicap match of thirty minutes, failing to secure a fall on the Boston man.

Raicevich and Romanoff showed great speed. The Italian was the smaller but was fully as strong as his opponent.

The big Russian was puzzled at the easy and graceful manner in which Raicevich went about his work, and was on the defensive practically all of the match.

The falls came about in a rather sensational manner. A great deal of painful work was indulged in, and Romanoff was the offender most of the time.

The struggle for the win lasted just forty minutes and eleven seconds. For a long time Raicevich found himself trying holds of every description that Romanoff broke, escaping in his efforts. Raicevich finally succeeded in securing the first fall when Romanoff was pinned out, after thirty-one minutes and ten seconds of wrestling.

The second fall was easy for the Italian, Romanoff started off well and succeeded in getting Raicevich on the defensive, but he afterward showed the white of his strong side, when Raicevich, with a lightning move, twisted the big fellow off his feet and flopped him over on his back for the second fall in the quick time of seven minutes and fifty-three seconds.

Manager Tinsley announced another wrestling match for January 22, in which he will have Carlo, a Hindoo, who reputed wonderful wrestler, meeting Zybszko in a finish match.

THEY HAVE FOUND THE WANDERING JEW! The Shoemaker who insulted Our Saviour, and who was doomed to wander about the earth until the second coming, is now reported from an oasis in warstricken Tripoli. Cartaphilus was thirty years old when he struck Jesus. He has lived ever since, but when he reaches the age of one hundred he returns to thirty again. Read about him in the Sunday AMERICAN.

MAYOR SHINES AS A BOWLER

Mayor Fitzgerald has received several calls to-day from the managers of City Hall bowling league teams to join their fires following his great work in a match at the East Boston Catholic Literary Association rooms.

The City Clerks, the Street Commissioners, the Collectors and the Street Cleaning team captains all claim first right to the Mayor's services, but it is hinted at City Hall that the Mayor will get up a team himself and challenge the leaders in the league and dodge the issue in this way.

The Mayor was the guest of the Noddle Island boys and was made captain of a team made up of John Owens, superintendent of the East Boston-Charlestown yard of the Street Department; Ex-Representative Joseph J. Murley; Rev. Patrick H. Riley, pastor of the Church of the Most Holy Redeemer and spiritual director of the association, and Richard McDonald, president of the association.

Patrick J. Kennedy captained the rival team. His men were: John Driscoll of East Boston, John H. Lane, Ex-Senator William J. Donovan and Representative Joseph H. Pendergast.

The match ended in a tie, each team winning a string. Following are the scores:

Basketball Notes

The registration committee of the Greater Boston League and managers of the eight teams will meet at the Revere House next Monday evening. The object of the meeting is to get evidence of professional players who claim to be amateurs. A schedule for the rest of the season will also be drawn up.

Hyde Park, which looked to be a contender for the professional title of the State, was handed its first defeat of the season Thursday night by the East Boston quintet. The Noddle Islanders are not youngsters at the game, and proved to have too much experience for the Ward 26 quintet.

Massachusetts teams are proving easy for the Troy team of the Hudson River League of New York. The team has won two games from Gloucester this week by large scores.

The Cunningham Gym second team is proving to be an easy winner in the Greater Boston League and unless the other junior teams aside the Milton five should have an easy time of it. The Reid and Stuart brothers are a hard combination to beat.

Schicker still continues to shoot the baskets at his will for the Fort Andrew teams. This strapping youngster is the heaviest scoring centre in the State this season and nearly one half of the team's strength. His shooting has been of the best and from hard angles. He is a fine defensive player.

Owing to a cancelation the Woolaneet five is without a game for Saturday, January 13, and would like to get some strong drawing card at home. The team has not lost a game in two seasons. Games are wanted with the St. Mary's second of Franklin, St. Joseph's second, Company B second of Plymouth and the Hustlers of Hopedale. The team averages 125 pounds. Manager Samuel Handel, No. 973 Washington street, City. Telephone Tremont 2108.

LOCAL FIVES IN HARD CONTESTS

Two games are carded to-night in the Greater Boston Basketball League. The games are sure to be hard ones and should be evenly contested. Some of the teams have made great piles this week and are sure to have the advantage over their opponents.

Both contests will be played out of the city, the St. Mary's five meeting the Cunningham Gym at East Milton, while the St. Alphonsus quintet and Lynn Y. M. C. A. meet at the latter's court.

The game between the Milton and North End teams should be evenly contested. Cunningham has displayed wonderful improvement during the past month and has been rolling along at a steady gait. Cyr and Rich, the two forwards, are coming mean fast and should prove valuable men before the season has progressed much further.

Powell, the dribbling centre, is a power of strength at the pivot position. He is holding his own against the best centres in the league and besides being an excellent shooter is fast good on the defence and aggressive.

The North End quintet has always played a good game, but hasn't been favored by the Dame Fortune. The hoodoo has been clinging to the team and the North End men are confident that they will be able to shake it in to-night's game.

The St. Alphonsus five will have to battle in order to beat the Lynn Y. M. C. A. Last Friday the two teams met and the Roxbury quintet won after a whirlwind finish.

The victory was the first one of the season for the St. Alphonsus team and the boys are out for a two straight win to-night. The five has been coming fast and should be a regular winner before the season has gone much further.

The first intercollegiate hockey game of the season will be played at the Boston Arena to-night, the contending teams being Dartmouth and Princeton.

This game should call out one of the largest gatherings of the season, as the enthusiasm among the collegians is running high in anticipation of seeing a hotly contested game.

Princeton has already gained somewhat of an invincible reputation in the hockey field since their first appearance on the ice, when they played Williams College, December 21, winning by a score of 14 to 0.

Again at Cleveland, in their first game of a series with Yale, on December 28, they won a decision over the blue by a score of 4 to 1.

Their second game, on December 29, they again beat the New Haven seven by a score of 6 to 2, this making two out of three games that were played.

Kling to Receive $9,000 as Manager of Pilgrims

Exit Tenney. Enter Kling.

Mr. John M. Ward has gone and done it.

Catcher Kling is captain and manager of the Boston Pilgrims in 1912 and Mr. Fred Tenney is let down nice and easy.

Mr. Ward, the new president of the club, made his announcement just before he left for New York and it did not create any great surprise.

In the AMERICAN of Thursday a telegram was printed from Kling in which the latter told of signing a contract with Ward and Gaffney, while the new club owners were in New York recently.

Mr. Ward denies this and in his statement declared that his announcement in naming Kling manager was the first one to the effect that he was waiting an answer from the latter at Kansas City where the new manager is making his home.

$9,000 Salary for Kling.

In view of this fact, however, the AMERICAN can state, on the best of authority, that Mr. Kling left Springfield, Mo., Thursday morning, after wiring his acceptance to Mr. Ward, with directions to forward any later messages, to Kansas City.

Kling, it is reported, will receive about $9,000 for two next seasons.

President Ward displayed considerable feeling when he gave his reasons for the change in management.

"I have been giving the matter serious consideration," said he, "especially as I didn't want the public to think that Fred Tenney was being disciplined.

"I knew Tenney to be a decent fellow, and did not care to have my actions criticised. My wants thought that to do the very best I could for the club.

"I didn't only wholly on my own judgment, but felt out every baseball man I knew in New York and Boston, both fans, players, even officials of clubs, as I wanted to get the consensus of opinions.

Wanted Player-Manager.

"After weighing the matter for several days I decided that I would prefer a playing manager, and I consider the catcher of a team the best man to look after the players on the field.

"When a club is in hard luck the public is likely to get after the manager but if this manager is a good, steady player, he fans are inclined to let up on him.

"I had a long talk with Mr. Kling and found him a gentlemanly sort of man I wanted. He has been trained in the up-to-date school, and I believe he can get good results out of the men we have under reserve.

"Tenney didn't have a chance to show his best work last season, as the team failed to show until the close, and he might have made a much better showing next season.

"However, I found that the players whom I talked with were unanimous for Kling; in fact Kling seemed to be the universal choice with those I talked with.

"I deeply regret having to turn down a good fellow. Tenney has a contract with the Boston club, and we will not ask him to compromise. When I return from New York next week we may talk the matter over."

Tenney may have other offers to manage ball clubs, and certainly we will not stand in his way.

President Ward left for New York on the 5 o'clock train, and said that he would not be back until late next week.

Kling sent a telegram to Ward saying that he accepted his new position and will leave for Boston any time that he is called for.

While President Ward was announcing the selection of Kling to the newspaper men, Fred Tenney was seated in one of the outside offices. He asked who was selected, and on being told that it was Kling said nothing. He did not say anything regarding his plans for the future.

Fourth Manager Forced Out.

The decision of President Ward makes the fourth manager forced out while under contract with the Boston National League club, the others being Joe Kelley, Frank Bowerman and Fred Lake, all of whom received the same treatment when a change in management.

"I have been giving the matter serious consideration," said he, "especially as I didn't want the public to think that Fred Tenney was being disciplined.

"I knew Tenney to be a decent fellow, and did not care to have my actions criticised. My wants thought that to do the very best I could for the club.

GOLFERS LOOK FOR CHANGES

Sweeping changes are expected in the Massachusetts Golf Association for 1912. Several new men will go into office, and every move by the new officials will be anxiously watched by the followers of the Scotch game.

The association will hold its annual meeting at the Exchange Club on Friday, January 19. A banquet will follow the business meeting. This will be attended by some of the leading golf authorities in the country.

Invitations have been extended to the presidents of the United States Golf Association, Metropolitan Golf Association, Philadelphia Golf Association, Rhode Island Golf Association and the Connecticut League and Golf Association and the Connecticut League and golf clubs.

The business meeting of the association is sure to be fun off without a hitch. Golf enthusiasts are greatly disappointed because R. R. Freeman is not a candidate for the office of secretary. He has occupied that position ever since the association was organized in 1900 and has done some excellent work. Mr. Freeman has given a great deal of his valuable time to the association. It was due in no small measure to his efforts that the association was organized.

E. E. Conant of Lowell, who has been treasurer of the club since it was organized, will devote his entire time to business in the future.

Henry H. Wilder of the Vesper Country Club has been named for the office of secretary, and Ralph P. Alden of the Springfield Country Club as treasurer.

Frederick H. Allen, the captain of the Massachusetts golf team and one of the best all-round players in New England, is mentioned as a candidate for the executive committee and a new nominee for that body is M. Henry H. Crosby of the Chestnut Hill Club. John G. Anderson, the State champion, was not renominated.

The list of nominees is as follows: Brae-Burn Country Club, Brookline Country Club, vice-president; Charles L. Capen; Jr., Alpine Golf Club; secretary, Henry H. Wilder, Vesper Country Club; treasurer, Ralph P. Alden, Country Club of Springfield; executive committee, S. H. Borden, Fall River Golf Club; Harry C. Ayer, Brae-Burn Country Club; George F. Willett, Essex County Club; R. R. Freeman, Wollaston Golf Club, and M. L. Crosby, Chestnut Hill Golf Club.

It is understood that Ralph Crockett will no longer serve as a member of the handicapping committee.

'WALSH WORLD'S BEST PITCHER'—'WILD BILL'

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 6.—"Wild Bill" Donovan, who is some twirler himself, has discovered the greatest pitcher in the world. "Big Ed" Walsh, the White Sox mound artist, is the man he nominates. The only reason Walsh ever has a defeat chalked up against him is because he is overworked, says "Wild Bill." "If he could go in only once in four days, letting the others rest between games, I don't see how any team could ever beat him" said Donovan.

WHITEWASH IN TICKET SCANDAL

CINCINNATI, Jan. 6.—A nice little coat of white wash for all concerned marked the final action in the celebrated ticket scalping scandal that ruffled the baseball world directly after the World's Championship series in New York and Philadelphia last October.

While the National Baseball Commission gathered enough evidence to assure it that baseball ticket scalping exists, even in both cities, yet this evidence indicated that not one of the New York baseball or the Philadelphia American League Club officials, employes or employees were in collusion with the scalpers.

The commission holds that the charges by the press at the time were justified, and profits criticism a number of persons who at the time of the episode offered Mr. Hitchings, of the Cincinnati baseball club, failed to furnish any evidence to back them.

Besides exonerating both clubs the commission refuses from for the extra precautions which were taken against scalping. The rule against scalping is upheld and penalties against scalping is urged.

The report of the decisions summed up was: The spectators couldn't have paid many tickets—if they did they didn't get them from the clubs—there ought to be a law made prohibiting ticket scalping anyway.

Schoolboy Sports

A meeting was held by the managers of the football, basketball, hockey and baseball teams at Milton High in regards to the printing of a school athletic book in which all the teams, including the fencing, lawn tennis and track baseball, will be represented. It is the plan of Principal Charles L. Curtis to have this book printed each year with the schedules, scores of all of the games, rules and other data that might be of interest. It is the management's wish to write an account of the season's work of the teams. Work will start at once and it is expected that the book will be put on sale at the school the latter part of February.

The manager of Everett High are counting on having another good football team next season. The captain of Everett this Fall was the best, but still the boys could not defeat Malden. But two players, Morando and Brackenbush, will graduate next June and with many good men the second team can be fitted up and will then be a winner.

The show of yesterday was too light to spoil the ice. The weather report that arrived last night was cold and stay for a few days was greeted by the schoolboys for they would like to have the ice in perfect condition for their hockey matches. The ice on the ponds in Boston has not been good enough as yet to allow the boys to play a slashing game.

Three different sports are now receiving attention at Dorchester High. Hockey, basketball and track work is going at full speed. The hockey team has been practicing two hours in each line. The track men started this week under the direction of Alfie Dickinson and it will not be long before class meets are held.

The track team at Boston Latin are getting daily sessions in the gymnasium. Coach O'Brien is developing the work and has another clever team of runners and jumpers. Several records are out to be tested and they should improve over the tests and they should improve over their last year's marks. Class games will be held shortly and then work will go ahead for the big schoolboy games.

A long list of hockey games are on the card for next week, and from all indications the most of them should be played. The games played to date have been good but the boys have showed lack of practice. It is hoped that by the next few games and it will not be long before the boys are causing the puck in championship style.

YALE-DARTMOUTH FIVES MEET TO-NIGHT

The Yale and Dartmouth basketball fives clash at Hanover to-night. The game is one in the Intercollegiate Leagues series, and is looked over Columbia three weeks ago. Captain Meanet's men have had little practice, but their playing together will undoubtedly help them to beat the work. This will be the first league game for the Yale team.

LAW IS HEAD OF FELLSWAY

George A. Law of Arlington was made president of the Fellsway Driving Club at the annual election held in the Fellsway's clubhouse in Somerville. The selection of Mr. Law was popular with the members, he having been an earnest worker in the interests of the organization since its inception.

Frank E. Morrison, who held the position of secretary since the formation of the club, absolutely declining to serve longer, T. E. Twombly was elected to the office.

The remaining officers elected were: Dr. W. H. Hitchings, first vice-president; Charles F. Forbush, second vice-president; Harry L. Davis, third vice-president; Dr. M. Burke, treasurer; Directors, Dr. Hitchings, Charles M. Lockwood, L. L. Baker, W. G. Savage, Charles H. Ferson, Jr., John Sleeper and H. L. Doty. George W. Coyle, G. M. Marinound and Charles Thyrum.

It was the general opinion that the outlook of the club is most promising. The small debt of the organization will soon be paid, and plans for building a covered Combination Park for the coming season for the club's matinees and special race meetings.

NEWS OF THE HORSES

Frank L. Whitcomb, owner of the Coon Hill Farm in Reading, will have out a racing stable this season and will train the trotting stallion Nemo Hugeu, 2:21¼.

Jacob Wirth of Boston has bought a fast pacer by Oxford Wilkes, dam by Alelayone, from a party in Providence, R. I. He has joined the Metropolitan Driving Club and will race his new purchase in the matinees of that club.

Thomas J. Griffin of the Dorchester Driving Club intends sending his three-year-old futurity candidate to Jimmy Murphy to get him conditioned for the campaign. J. Crowley will have Mr. Murphy's three-year-old Worthy Prince, 2:28¼, in his string at Readville for a trip over the half-mile tracks.

Turf authorities have not given the stallion Bingen (2:09¾) the credit of being the sire of Mowitza (2:29¾), which brings the number to five performers of the get in this season up to twenty-one, the best made by any stallion. Bowling was sired by the late John Hood of Hyde Park, and was out of a mare by Bingen. He earned his record in a winning five-heat race over a half-mile track in Connecticut.

Trainer Knapp Forshury has sold his Mystic House stable, in Medford, to C. F. Adams of Somerville. Knapp has purchased a hotel property and stable in Marlboro. He will continue handling horses for the public during the season at the Marlboro half-mile track in the Spring.

The annual election of the Metropolitan Driving Club took place on Wednesday evening at the clubhouse at Charles River Speedway. The committee appointed to name the candidates for office are G. H. Bent, George F. Leonard and Frank E. Fuller.

J. O. Reay of the Metropolitan and Dorchester driving clubs has sold his speedy pacer, Wesley Summers, to a New York horseman. Wesley Summers was one of the fastest and most consistent horses in the matinees of the Mets' last season.

Joseph Quirk, who will be the trainer of the Red Sox baseball team, is well known in local horse circles, having, six years ago, when called "Alligator Joe," by his chums and co-workers, was a groom at Mystic Park, rubbing many of the best trotters and pacers that raced in the old Circuit company. In his prime Joe was quite a fast runner, seven Brockton fairs he won half-mile affair Joe won a good rate over some of the fastest runners in this section, being a hundred yards in 10 seconds. The course was very sandy and a bit up grade.

President Fred Garmon of the Metropolitan Driving Club drove from his home in Lynn to the club's clubhouse in Boston every morning this week, one of the few times he has used a sleigh. Mr. Garmon thinks very highly of his recent purchase, the 5-year-old brother of Ethel, 1:58½, which he has named Uhlenda. In Neilie Bly, Uhlenda's dam, Garmon believes he has a very fast show trotter.

There is promise that Alicen Wilson, 2:02¼, the racing mare formerly owned by John Cuddy of Boston, will be seen in the racing sulky next season, as she is coming around again after her accident of last Summer.

Paddy Callahan Picked to Beat K. O. O'Connor To-night

By JACK CONWAY.

Frankie O'Connor will be pitted against a worthy foeman when he clashes with "Irish Paddy" Callahan in an eight-round bout at the American A. C. to-night. The little South End lassiter has made a wonderful record as a preliminary fighter. Two-thirds of his engagements have been won by a knockout.

O'Connor is under the management of Eddie Mack, who also looks after the affairs of Johnny Connolly, the south light-weight champion. Mack has been severely criticised for matching O'Connor with such a well known performer as Callahan. In discussing to-night's bout, Eddie said:

"There are many people who believe that Frankie will be easy picking for Callahan, but here is where they make one big mistake. K. O. is one of the most promising light-weights in New England. He is awkward and consequently causes his opponent a great deal of trouble. The reputation he has gained by taking a chance with the former Brooklyn boxer.

"Callahan has been challenged Al Delehanty, Jimmy Walsh, Mark Cosley, Young Dundee and several other good fights, but his challenges have been of no avail.

"Callahan is a big boy to weigh in at 120 pounds at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. This means that O'Connor will outweigh the South Boston boy by about five pounds. Callahan is a dandy boy.

Terry Brooks of New York will meet Dave Powers of Malden in the semi-final. These men met at the West End club several weeks ago and Powers was given a fairly interesting battle.

Young Carlos of the West End will meet Frank Rotondo of the North End in the curtain raiser of four rounds. There will be a six round preliminary between Joe Vargus of Cambridge and Kid O'Brien of Boston.

If the proposed match between Jack Johnson and Jim Flynn ever takes place, the Pueblo fighter will surely be defeated. Johnson is in one class and Flynn in another. One of the greatest of the game men in the ring but he is no match for the burly Galveston black, who outclasses him in every department of the game. Nobody knows always better than Flynn himself. After Jim was knocked out by Johnson in Carson City, at San Francisco, July 4, 1907 he admitted that he would never stand the gaff that Jack was to put up against him. Flynn, however, is still a good champion. In point of weight and height he is overweight and with a month's training would be able to put up a good battle. Flynn, however, is willing to take a beating for the loser's end of a purse.

It is hoped that the officials of the Armory A. A. will be successful in their efforts to get Jack Johnson to box a regretable fact if Boston, which is recognized as the home of sporting events in the world, should be without a first-class boxing bout. Johnson is willing to do his part in helping to keep up the interest in the game, but the Armory A. A. officials cannot put on the top notchers. The boys have always turned out in large numbers to witness the big bouts. A club that can deliver the goods is sure to be patronized by the boxing enthusiasts of this city.

A good show is billed for the Whip City Athletic club's benefit next Monday night. Paddy Lynch of O'Neill and Battling Phildelphia Jack O'Keefe will be the principals in the star bout. Lynch would like to get Battling Jack O'Keefe in the ring so as to get a return bout with him. Eddie Kevern I believe was on as a substitute. I would like to see Harley given a chance to redeem himself.

Jim Driscoll, the wonderful English featherweight, is soon coming to this country, and will start after a match with Abe Attell. Driscoll met the little wizard when he was last in this country and gave Abe one of the toughest battles of the career. There has been a great deal of talk about Driscoll signing to meet Owen Moran, who is now in this city. This match is very improbable, as both Moran and Driscoll are under the management of Jimmy Johnson. Like Attell, Driscoll is able to defeat a large number of the present-day lightweights.

Mike Glover of South Boston is scheduled to meet Jack Meekins of England in a fifteen-round bout at Paris to-night. Glover is out to defeat his opponent decisively, for in this way he will get a match with Georges Carpentier, the French middleweight champion. Some boxers are reaping quite a harvest in Gay Paree. Harry Lewis and Carpentier drew $20,000 in their recent bout.

The matchmaker of the Western Gateway Athletic club of North Adams would like to get the addresses of New England's boxers.

Flash! Flash!—The Cross-Chip fight was declared a draw by the Pittsburg press. Burns weighed about 180 pounds when he fought Johnson, while Jack tipped the beam in the vicinity of 210 pounds.

NEWTON HIGH WINS OVER STONE'S SCHOOL

The Newton High School hockey team secured a second victory of the season on the Brae-Burn C. C. link, beating the Stone School seven by 6 to 3. The victory was finished by Chester Foote, captain of the Orange and Black last season, who managed to pound the puck through the Newton goal for all three of Stone's scores. The Newton team showed a fast game throughout, Captain Bob Spanking getting three and Foote one.

Imperfections—A Few of Them

By DOROTHY DIX

WHAT are the ten worst faults of wives?

NAGGING—There is just one woman in a million who can say a thing once and let it go at that.

INCOMPETENCE—Bad housekeeping rates as many homes as drink.

JEALOUSY—The average woman is suspicious of every other woman, from his grandmother to his stenographer, to whom her husband is decently civil.

WHINING—There are few women who do not adopt the role of martyrs, and who do not complain to their husbands how hard it is that they can't have limousines and tiaras as some richer woman does.

HYPOCHONDRIA—Chemical women are as rare as hen's teeth. Most wives consider it a sacred duty to be a wet blanket on any festive occasion when their husbands take them out, and to deluge the poor men, as soon as they have gotten home of an evening, with all the woes of the day.

TEMPER—Too many women consider that they have a right to act like a fury and take the dishwires in the bosom of their families.

NARROWNESS—There is no other human being more afflicting to live with than the woman who can never see any point of view but their own, and who goes about measuring the world with her own little one-inch rule of morals and conduct.

HENPECKING—There are a vast number of wives who feel that their wedding rings entitle them to police their husbands' every thought and action, and to dictate to them how they shall have their hair cut, what kind of collars they shall wear, what church they shall go to, and what kind of breakfast food they shall eat.

DULLNESS—A large proportion of wives become so self centred that they are as stupid as dish water. They do not know anything outside of their own home, and their conversation is so stupid that their husbands flee from it to the club, or the corner saloon.

LACK OF APPRECIATION—Nine wives out of ten let their husbands slave themselves to death for them without ever making any sign of gratitude. A man doesn't care to have his wife get out a brass band to celebrate the fact that he supports her in comfort, but he would appreciate a vote of thanks from her and a few words of appreciation now and then.

Now for the Men

What are the ten chief faults of husbands?

TYRANNY—Most men marry with the idea of getting somebody that they think they can boss.

INDIFFERENCE—The average man sets his wife down in a home as soon as they are married, and, as far as she can tell, never takes another look at her. He doesn't take the trouble to observe if she has on a new dress, or is doing her hair in a new way, or even when she has cooked herself to a chicfer preparing the dishes he likes.

BRUTALITY—Few men ever consider their wives' feelings, and most men speak to their wives in a way they wouldn't dare to speak to any other human being on earth.

KNOCKING—A husband rarely ever praises his wife for her good management and skill when the home is run all right, but let the bread be burned or the meat tough, or her be guilty of having a bad bargain, and he can't say enough about it.

STINGINESS—Ninety-nine men out of a hundred take from their wives such service as no money will buy and then think themselves paragons of generosity because they feed and clothe these domestic slaves. Not one man in a million deals fairly, not to say generously, with his wife on the money question.

FAITHLESSNESS—Every man expects his wife to forgive him for the things for which he would divorce her.

LACK OF TENDERNESS—How few women ever hear a word of love-making or get a kiss that isn't a perfunctory peck on the top of the head or the tip of the left ear, after the honeymoon.

LACK OF CONSIDERATION—Most men act as if being married to them were picnic enough to anybody. It is only the exceptional man who realizes that housekeeping and baby tending are monotonous work, and that it is up to the husband to take his wife about and give her as many little treats as he can afford.

The M-M-M-M-M-M HAB.T—The average husband is about as entertaining to talk to at home as a sore-headed bear. All he does is to growl over the unintelligible reply when his wife tries to get an answer out of him.

SELF-CONCEIT—Nothing makes an intelligent woman so tired as to have to continually flatter her husband, and pretend that she thinks he is an oracle when she doesn't, and nothing fills her with such contempt for him as to know that she can work him through his vanity.

Of which of these faults, Mr. and Mrs. Reader, are you guilty? Have you got them all bunched? Examine yourself and see. It will be an interesting and wholesome experience.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

"They're Better Off"

THE Lysander John Appleton family owns a "country place," which sounds large, but isn't, and the beneficent results of a Summer there are represented by the joy Daysey Mayme took in heading her letters "The Cedars," in compliment to a scrubby little cedar tree that had a precarious existence on a chicken roost in the back yard.

Incidentally, there was the dream of the great wealth which would result from the care of the four old hens that represented the Appletons' "immense poultry interests."

When Lysander John went home to dinner recently he found his wife and Daysey Mayme in tears, and Chauncey Devere was sniffing, her fashion, on the backs of his fists. Their tears continued to flow while putting the dinner on the table, and when Lysander John, in an effort to cheer them, and not knowing the cause of their sorrow, passed the fried chicken, their grief increased boundless. The women sobbed, and Chauncey Devere cried so hard his face became streaked in black, the most sincere mourning a boy knows.

"This is poor Susie Belle's back," said Daysey Mayme, looking with tear-filled eyes at a piece of her food.

"And I have Fair Lilian's neck," sobbed Chauncey Devere, adding deeper streaks of black to his face.

"Don't you think," choked Mrs. Appleton, "that this might be Susie Belle's liver?"

"They were so tame and affectionate, and always came when I called them," sobbed Daysey Mayme. "Only yesterday Fair Lilian ate out of my hand."

"Poor Susie Belle! How long," said Mrs. Appleton, wiping her tears away with her napkin, and putting her teeth into a drumstick, "and they are better off."

"Yes, they are better off," sighed Daysey Mayme, passing her plate for another piece, "and I never dreamed that Fair Lillian would taste so good."

And the platter was passed and repassed till not a piece of Susie Belle or Fair Lillian was left, the mourners presenting, with what appetites they had, Fair Lillian and Susie Belle were better off, and that it was much to be grateful for that their sufferings were over.

Mother Nature may be those who see no moral in this little tale, but it exists if you will but open your ears and listen to it. Some day you will be in the place of Fair Lillian and Susie Belle, and the mourners, between their sobs AND A DIVISION OF WHAT IS LEFT, will say, "She is Better Off," and take melancholy comfort in repeating it.

And since the fate of Susie Belle and Fair Lillian is some day to be yours, why not be happier in life while you have it?

"Married Life the Third Year" is a regular feature of the Sunday AMERICAN. Don't miss the instalment of Mrs. Urner's interesting series in the Sunday AMERICAN.

Complexion Rules for Changeable Weather

By GABY DESLYS

"I recommend cold cream for all purposes of cleaning."

I MUST tell you frankly that the more I see, or rather feel, of your climate the more I dislike it, and the more my admiration grows for the women of London who can stand it and even bloom in this constant change.

Yesterday we froze; to-day is like Spring; to-morrow it will rain, a warm, Summer-like, sticky rain, yet you can all go right on enjoying yourselves regardless of the weather and the depressing effect which the unnatural warmth has on the disposition or the equally distressing effect of sudden cold on the health.

Frankly, then, I do not like it. Also it perplexes me to know just how to adjust myself to the constant change, for at home I have an ordered and systematic way of caring for my health and looks in Summer and an entirely different regimen for Winter weather. Here I have to use one system one day and the other one the next.

Use Only Cream

I do not use water on my face in Winter at all. Nothing but cold cream, skin foods and unguents of various kinds.

Here I do the same on cold days. On the contrary, however, in Summer I use quite a good deal of water, a very little of the creams and much ice water on my face.

Now that I find Summer suddenly transposed into Winter, like ice cream in an "omelette surprise," I have to accommodate myself to your climatic conditions, but neither I nor my maid seems able to get used to it.

When the weather is chilly, especially nowadays with the light clothin- which fashion makes so stylish, the skin feels the effect immediately, and even if one's hands and face don't chap, which they should never be allowed to do, a slight roughness appears on the skin, which is dry and unelastic. It is then that you must avoid using water of any kind, even rain water, which is supposed to be so soft and soothing to the skin.

Use your cold cream instead. If you have none or if you prefer it, use milk. Milk is delightful for washing the face and is not a fad, but a sensible and certainly a simple cosmetic. I don't like the odor of milk, and when I use it I have to wash it off in turn with perfumed water, so it has little effect. One should really allow the milk to dry on the skin, you know, especially if one has freckles. For freckles a buttermilk wash is even better, and I can recommend that, particularly in the Spring, when one should guard against a new crop of those disfiguring spots.

Beware of Winter

In the meantime, at this time of year, when we should be having Winter, and probably will be chilled through before this is printed, I recommend cold cream for all purposes of cleaning. Rub a small quantity over the face and wipe it off carefully with a cloth or towel which is very soft. Cheesecloth, or butter-cloth, as they call it in London, is good if it has been washed out, but I think it is very hard and rough before the stiffening, or whatever that finish is which cheesecloth has, is boiled out.

After you have wiped your face off with the cloth put on more cream and wipe it all off again. While you are putting the cream on, after the first few times begin to massage or rub the face, and by the time you have wiped off all the dust you will have given yourself a very good face treatment, and you will be surprised to see how refreshed your skin looks and how brilliant your complexion.

When I am through I take a little eau de cologne or pure alcohol and wipe away the grease near the roots of the hair, behind the ears and at the side of the nose, also around the eyes.

Now I am ready for a little rice powder, and the cleansing treatment for Winter days is finished. My skin never chaps and always feels soft and fresh.

Ice water will make your cheeks very rosy and is very refreshing used on the face. Sometimes I use it on these warm January days and pretend it is cold Winter weather.

Woman, Have You Stopped Beating Your Husband?

Of Course You Never Did Beat Him, Physically, but the Beating Described by Mrs. Van de Water Seems Much More Terrible Than Any Form of Mere Corporal Punishment. Read Some of the Story Here. Read the Rest in the SUNDAY AMERICAN MONTHLY MAGAZINE.

TO do my wife justice, I must insist that she did not appreciate how far apart we were drifting. I was so much absorbed in my business that it was only at times that I, myself, saw clearly how small a factor I had become in the moral or intellectual life of my household. Such an awakening came to me one evening when Ted was twelve years old. The child had sat up so late the night before that he had overslept the next morning, and been late to school in consequence. He told his mother of this occurrence as we sat at dinner, and asked that an excuse be written for him to give his teacher the following day so that he might not receive the "tardy mark" which he surely deserved. My sense of justice suddenly came to the front, and I told the boy that it was only right he should take the consequences of his fault. Myra said nothing, but I saw by her face that she did not agree with me. Ted, too, recognized this fact, for he remarked with a flash of triumph:

"Mother will write the excuse for me, won't you, Mother?"

I looked from mother to son. This was the time, I thought, when my wife must uphold my authority.

"I'll see about it," replied Myra evasively.

"Myra," I protested, "you will spoil all the good the punishment might do if you help the child evade it. He sat up late last night in direct disobedience to your orders that he go to bed. He did not get up when you called him this morning. He must pay the penalty."

My wife looked at me beseechingly.

"Don't be so hard, Theodore," she pleaded. "Ted became interested in a book he was reading last night and forgot what I had told him about going to bed early. So it was but natural that he should be so tired this morning that he went to sleep again after being called."

"Nevertheless," I insisted, "he disobeyed in both cases."

My wife sighed wearily. "What's the use," she said, "of having so much discussion over a mere trifle?"

"Yes!" remarked Lois pertly. "Let's talk of something else!"

She was always her brother's champion and rebelled at the suggestion of punishment for him.

"Lois," I said sharply, "please do not interfere when your mother and I are talking. It is impertinent."

Whereupon my daughter burst into tears and left the table. My wife laid down her knife and fork.

"Theodore," she said coldly, "this is not the kind of scene the children should witness. Kindly let the matter drop for the present."

But I was angry. "I will not let it drop," I said, "until you assure me that you will not write that note of excuse for Ted. He must take his punishment like a man."

My son turned on me with a hard expression in his round blue eyes.

"Mother will do as she likes!" he burst forth. "I don't see what you have to say about it!"

"Ted!" exclaimed his mother. "Come here to me." And, when he stood beside her, she put her arm about him and spoke gently:

"Dear, you are angry and excited now, and I want you to say no more —for my sake, Son!"

The child kissed her as she lifted her face to his, but he was still flushed and angry.

"I'll stop for your sake, Mother," he said, "for you love me, even if Dad doesn't!"

His eyes met mine defiantly, and I spoke sternly:

"You are unpardonably impertinent, sir, and I expect you to apologize—do you understand?"

I sprang to my feet, pushing my chair back violently as I did so.

"The time has come when my son has to learn to speak to me respectfully!" I declared. "He may not love me, but he shall show me respect!"

"I don't see why!" exclaimed the angry lad.

"Myra!" I urged, "are you going to allow this kind of thing? Aren't you going to stand by me in this matter?"

My wife threw out her hands with an exclamation of distress.

"For pity's sake!" she exclaimed, "let the matter drop! I can't stand the kind of thing!" and, burying her face in her hands, she began to sob. Turning on my heel I left the room, but as I glanced back from the hall I saw the boy's arms were about her and that she had laid her head on his shoulder. The look in his eyes made me know that he regarded himself as her champion against an unreasonable husband. Sick at heart, I put on my hat and coat and left the house, walking for an hour in the bitter wind. It was the loneliest hour of my life. I felt that between the three I loved best in the world and myself it there was a great gulf fixed, and I ought to cross it. That my wife did not uphold my authority nor resent my son's rebellion against that authority, cut me cruelly.

When I returned home my wife had gone to her room and to bed, but, as I entered the darkened chamber, she spoke.

"Come in—I am not asleep."

I turned on the light and looked at her. She had evidently had an unhappy evening, for her heavy eyes showed that she had been crying long and hard. It took much resolution on my part to say with enforced gentleness:

"Dear, I don't want to bring up a painful subject—but did you write the note for Ted?"

She answered me as calmly as I had spoken:

"Yes, I did. And I do not want, any more than you, to bring up an unfortunate matter, nor do I wish to argue. So I will simply ask you to believe that I have my own reasons for what I have done, and I know I am right. I understand the children as you do not."

"Did you tell Ted he was impertinent to me?" I asked coldly.

"I asked him never to speak to you in that way again," she said.

"And he promised because you asked it, I suppose?"

"Yes, he promised because I asked it. He is a good child and I can manage him always."

"I wish," I said, "that you could make him acknowledge when he is in the wrong. That is your duty, Myra."

She closed her eyes wearily. "I must be willing," she said, "to be misunderstood in this matter. I suppose you would understand the children and me if you could—but it is evident that you can't."

"Dear," I said bending over her, "we used to understand each other when we were first married."

"Yes," she admitted, sighing again, "but that was years ago—before the children came."

"Yes," I said bitterly, as I turned down the light, "it was before the children came." And, with a sigh deeper than my wife's, I left the room.

After that evening there was a subtle change in our lives. Until then my wife had gone through the form of consulting me about her plans for the children. Henceforth—

What happened "henceforth" will be found in Virginia Terhune Van de Water's "When the Children Come Between Husband and Wife," in the Sunday American Monthly Magazine. The Sunday American Monthly Magazine will be distributed to-morrow to all readers of the Sunday AMERICAN. We earnestly suggest a careful study of this wonderful story by every father, every mother, every son and every daughter in New England.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

BE A DIPLOMAT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been going with a young man two years. He is on a ship and doesn't come home often. I have a sister younger than myself and her birthday is coming. He sent her a present and also a letter stating he is coming to see her. Would you give him up?

M. E. C.

WAIT until he comes and find out where you stand with him.

Perhaps he has a friendly interest in your sister on your account. I would not be too hasty, but would give him a chance to "show his hand," in the meantime pretending that you notice nothing.

In this way you will not arouse his suspicion, if he means nothing, and, on the other hand, if he has changed you will preserve your dignity, and perhaps win back his regard by keeping your feelings to yourself.

SHE MUST TELL THE OTHER MAN

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty and deeply in love with a girl of the same age, who is in love with me. She made a promise to her mother, who is dead, to marry a certain rich man.

She loves me dearly and I her, but she is persistent in keeping her promises to a dead parent. Kindly advise me.

C. M.

IF the girl, because of a mistaken duty, chooses to wreck her happiness, and yours, and do a great injustice to the other man, you are powerless to prevent it. Ask her to tell the other man all the circumstances. If he is honorable, he will release her. There is no other way.

Memory Can Make You Beautiful

The Beautiful Events of Your Past Life Can Be Reflected in Your Face and Do More for Your Looks Than Any Cosmetic, Paint, Powder or Massage

This is truth the poet sings:
That a sorrow's crown of sorrow is remembering happier things.
—TENNYSON'S LOCKSLEY HALL.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THAT is a beautiful line from a beautiful poem—but it isn't true.

A sorrow's crown of sorrow is FORGETTING HAPPIER THINGS.

Truly crowned with sorrow is the person whose mind dwells on a disappointment of to-day and cannot live on the happiness of days that are past.

Thousands of human beings, especially women and girls, are made happy by dreams, thoughts and recollections of past hours. And those thoughts make the face and the mind as well beautiful.

It is commendable, my dear girls, to cultivate good looks, but don't in your zealous interest in teeth, hair and skin, forget the greater essential in becoming good looking, and that is the cultivation of a happy soul.

The eyelashes and eyebrows may be perfect, and the color of the eye be beautiful, but unless the light that shines through them is clear and brave and happy and honest all the physical perfection is lost.

To begin with, cultivate a happy memory. Cultivate the art of remembering a pretty sunset, a pleasant outing, a friend by smile. It rains to-day the memory of a bright sunshine yesterday will make it less gloomy, and its brightness may be extended to brighten up the clouds to-morrow.

Tennyson once said, "This is truth the poet sings, that a sorrow's crown of sorrow is remembering happier things."

It is daring to say a poet laureate could be wrong, but it will interest you to personally prove that he is. If in your sorrow you can recall a day when you were happy and smile at the memory, you are wiser than a great poet, and that wisdom will keep your eyes bright, prevent the corners of your mouth from turning down, and make you better looking.

Get into the habit of storing bright, happy things in your memory box. Make it a charm string of bright beads; don't make it resemble a string of old, useless pasta buttons, of which the world always holds a useless surplus.

When on your way down town in the morning think of the most pleasant things that happened yesterday. Don't engrave on your face the story of its disappointments.

This may seem difficult at first but practice makes it easier. Particularly do I entreat those dear girls to smile for whom the little pink sphere of romance has burst.

If a man has proved a recreant lover, nothing makes him so ashamed, nothing does so much to convince him of his utter unworthiness, and nothing so determines him to ask for a chance to try again, as a brave, happy smile on the face of the girl he ill treated.

Tears can't be cashed in commercial life nor in the realm of romance. The lover who is wept back never stays longer than it takes him to break loose from his moorings and float off.

The girl who smiles is the girl who smiles and the best way to get the habit of smiling is to cultivate a memory of happier days. Don't enjoy a pleasure once and then forget it. Put it away in that memory box, and get it out in dull and stormy weather and enjoy it over again.

"For he blest is he who can make his enjoy the present well and e'en the past enjoy."

Freak Houses

A WEALTHY American is building a house in Connecticut. Most of it is built from the old British battleship Wellington. The north wing to be composed of an old Tudor manor house Suffolk, which between now and the Spring will have been transported in instalments across the Atlantic.

When his assemblage of styles is completed the enterprising owner will certainly be able to boast that he has carried out his announced intention of "making the architects of two continents blink."

A Submarine Villa

One of the most famous of all freak houses exists on an estate on the edge of the forest of Fontainbleau, near Paris. It is a mansion built in the branches of two mighty oaks. The owner, a retired silk merchant, uses it as his country house for six months every year during the leafy period. There is nothing flimsy about it, though it is all wood.

A tall staircase leads to the main door. The house has gables, windows and chimneys, just like any building on solid ground. A balcony ten feet wide runs around the whole.

With such ingenuity did the architect work that practically no entire new way was found necessary. In several places the giant trees are bound together by green-painted iron chains in order to afford a solid platform.

An equally enviable and equally original man is the owner of what is practically a submarine villa. It is situated at Lakeside, a fashionable suburb of Chicago. The owner, a pork packer, works all the year round, taking no holidays.

But he escapes a great deal of the scorching Chicago Summer by transplanting himself every June to the submarine cottage whose top lies ten feet below the surface of Lake Michigan, which skirts his gardens. The house under the lake is small, but it contains a library, room and a study, as well as bedrooms and kitchen. Only one servant accompanies the enterprising packer of pork to his cool Summer home.

At the other end of the scale of expense, but equally novel, was the dainty little cottage which a year ago came in possession of near Petersborough, England. The fascinations of his bookishness had reclaimed him from a wasting life. It was the pride that made his daub his name all over the outside with paint that betrayed him.

Spoiling the Joke

Of all freak houses, perhaps the queerest would have been one in Sunset, Arkansas, who was trying to settle down to English ways, had a small country house there, holding a commanding situation on a hilltop. An indelicious waggon touched his American pride, and he started showing his defiance for all things British by covering a quad of fifty painters to paint the four sides of his house in the glorious colors of the Stars and Stripes. They obeyed gleefully, but a local district council stepped in and spoiled the joke.

Desperate Desmond

DESMOND YOU VILLAIN, WE ARE DOOMED, WE ARE GOING TO REMAIN OUTSIDE IF YOU STOP PLAYING YOU WILL BE SHOT DOWN, YOU SCAB
THIS PIANO STOOL WILL RAISE ME A LITTLE AND I CAN STILL KEEP PLAYING THE LOVERS DESPAIR BUT FOOL YOU FOR A FEW MOMENTS
NOW TO WHEEL THE HAMMOCK I CAN KEEP PLAYING WITH MY TRUSTY FOOT. RIC CLAUDE AND ROSAMOND YET!
AHA! A CRANE HAS SNEAKED INTO THIS TENT. THE SEEDS I THREW ON THE TWO WILL MAKE THE CRANE PECK AT THEM HAVING THE LOVERS THINK I'M STILL AT THE PIANO. NOW TO ESCAPE TO MY TURKISH PALS AND PLAN MY REVENGE, HAHA
HORRORS! WE HAVE BEEN DECEIVED, IT ISN'T DESMOND AT THE PIANO HERE COMES THE VILLAIN NOW, ROSAMOND
CURSES! HE SAVED ME, CLAUDE YOU ARE A BRAVE AND NOBLE HERO!
CLAUDE I LOVE YOU!

Not much fun in playing the piano when a single touch on the wrong key will bring a heavy hammer ker-plunk down on your head. However, Desmond has no choice, since he will be shot down like a rabbit if he stops playing for a single moment. We doubt if the villain is getting much expression into his ever tune he is playing, although every little note may have a sinister meaning of its own.

As soon as Claude and Rosamond have gone into the next room, the villain puts a plan into practice. By whirling around rapidly, the resourceful scoundrel makes the piano stool rise in the air. Being a bit of an acrobat, Desmond continues to play the piano as he revolves. This is a little stunt that few music teachers impart to their pupils. It is useful to Desmond, however.

As the piano stool whirls upward, Desmond comes within reaching distance of the hammer, but how is he to grasp it without causing the music to stop? Ah, his feet! Like playing the piano with one's back to it, playing it with the feet is a comparatively rare accomplishment, although, it must be confessed, many a musical person believes their pianoforte accomplishments are playing with their feet.

Desmond is a wonder. He knows that the moment the music ceases, Claude will return and shoot him down like the cur that he is, and yet he must do a rapid getaway. Seeds that he scattered on the keys of the piano attract, as he had hoped they would, a large crane, and as the bird pecks at the seeds it produces a fair imitation of Desmond's playing. With a hoarse chuckle the villain sees his plan succeed.

To the strains of some apparently Turkish melody, Desmond crawls out of the tent, while the heroic, but not quite so sagacious, Claude lulls himself into false security in the tent room. Hearing the sound of the piano, our hero thinks Desmond is engaged in bringing about his own destruction. Ah, well this being too trustful is a good fault after all, and one that is very, very rare.

"I'm the boy!" cries Desperate Desmond, "and this here's my camel!" The villain is riding to attack the tent in which Claude and Rosamond had fondly imagined he would meet his doom. It is a bitter surprise for the hero to see Desmond, but he gamely resolves to fight to the death, and man can do no more than that. For full details of the coming battle see Monday's pictures.

The Story of the New Play by George Broadhurst

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

By John A. Moroso

Copyright, 1911, by George Broadhurst.

PART ONE—(Continued)

IT was not the love of money that spurred him in his efforts. The financial game downtown in New York was a big chess game. The pawns were heaps of gold or their equivalent, castles and ocean-going yachts. They shifted from one side of the board to the other, were captured and retaken. Stafford dally sat in at the game and, as he reached his fortieth year, he was secure in a full knowledge of it, and none could beat him when he played in good form.

The town rang with his name.

"Stafford sells Consolidated Iron," the ticker would announce, and a horde of minor operators in stocks would sell after him.

I CAN CURE YOU OF RHEUMATISM FREE

This photograph truthfully shows the terrible effects of rheumatism in my case, but today I enjoy perfect health and devote my life to curing others.

After spending $20,000 and suffering untold agony for thirty-six years, I discovered a remedy which permanently cured me, and I will send you a package of the very same medicine absolutely free.

Don't send any money—it's free. A letter will bring it promptly.

Your absolute satisfaction at all times is positively guaranteed.

Every day lost means one more day of needless pain, so write now to R. F. Dalano, Dept. 1664, Dalano Bldg., Syracuse, N. Y.

"Stafford buys Blue Mountain Preferred," the little clicking instruments would reel out, and the horde would buy after him.

He had become a master financier.

As a boy he had been poor and his parents had died long before he had made a start. Of good stock, and with a fine presence, he attracted attention as a young man.

He was well mannered and alert. As a clerk in a Wall Street brokerage office, he made a quick advancement. But he was not of the sort that remains long on a salary roll.

As soon as he gathered his first hundred dollars he plunged with it and made a thousand. He did this by margin investment. The thousand he wisely invested in actual stock which was at the bottom of the list. When his thousand had become two thousand, he played it again and thus his initial capital in the Street was secured.

As his money piled up, Stafford studied deeper and deeper into industrial values. He learned the game from the bottom up, and he was seldom fooled by ill advice. He advised no one himself, and took all the tips he received with more than a grain of salt.

Many times a millionaire at forty, surrounded by luxury of every sort, he yet lived only for the sound of the ticker and the excitement of the game he was playing. Even in his magnificent suite at his hotel secretaries were always at his elbow, telephones were always ringing, and the little glass-covered ticker ticked away as ceaselessly as a cricket on a cool October night.

Occasionally some woman would attract him for the moment; but he was not a woman's man. Standing six feet, with gray splashing his temples, heavy of build, square of jaw and with a firm pair of lips and keen hazel eyes, he frightened the timid type of woman, and the other kind did not interest him. The millionaire entered his apartment as the sun was setting.

A Lonesome Millionaire

Outside, the Fifth avenue parade was dwindling as people of fashion made their way home to dress for dinner. From his windows he beheld the cool foliage of Central Park beyond the Sherman statue in the Plaza. The evening star was showing pale in the heavens near a cloud that was gilded with the glow from the Western bed of the sun.

Stafford called his valet, Oku, a faithful Jap.

"Oku," he said, "I shall dress shortly. I shall dine alone to-night. bring me the hotel card."

Oku, with a bow to his master, disappeared.

The millionaire was feeling lonesome. He was a man of few friends.

He stood in a deep window, staring moodily over the park, his hands twisting behind him.

Oku returned with the card.

Glancing at it, Stafford gave his order and told his servant to have his champagne at the right temperature.

"I want it cold, Oku," he said with a tone of irritation in his voice, "but I don't want it frapped, y' know. See to it that the stupid waiter has it right."

"Yes, Misser Stafford," replied the Jap.

"And with my coffee, Oku, serve a pony of my own private stock brandy."

"Yes, sir."

Stafford returned to his mooning at the window.

Suddenly he turned and rushed to the telephone on his desk in his writing room.

"By thunder, I almost forgot to call Russell," he exclaimed.

He picked up the receiver.

"Hello, Central," he said in an even tone.

"This is Mr. Stafford. Please get Washington. I want Mr. John H. Russell. I have forgotten his number. They know it very well in the Washington Exchange. Thank you. That will be very kind of you."

He dropped the receiver.

"What a Sweet Voice," He Said.

"What a sweet voice," he said. "It was the voice of a gentlewoman, soft and low."

He returned to the instrument in a few moments.

"This is Mr. Stafford, Central," he said.

The voice over the wire replied:

"I have Washington, Mr. Stafford, but the girl there is newly promoted and she is slow. I shall have to be patient with her. But just as soon as I can I shall call you."

"Oh, I thank you," replied Stafford. "I am in no great haste. Be patient with her."

"I shall sir," came the answer.

Stafford again hung up the receiver.

"Why, she's the day girl," he mused to himself, "and it is six o'clock now. She is staying overtime to get me my number. That is very considerate and kind. I must remember her in some way. How lovely is her voice!"

The Music of a Voice.

STAFFORD was haunted by the music of Virginia's voice for all of his mature years and been crowded with business, and never a thought of love and the lights of domesticity had entered his mind.

The rich man, accustomed to having everything he desired given him at once, struck upon the idea of having his own telephone operator, and the idea no sooner came to him than he had the manager of the hotel summoned to his apartment.

"Mr. Kahn," said Stafford, "quick work is an essential in my business life. You have a young lady on the telephone board who gives me excellent service, which I fully appreciate. Now, if it would be possible, I would like to make some arrangement by which she would have charge of all the calls from my apartment and all outside calls that may come in for me."

"Very easily arranged, Mr. Stafford," replied Kahn.

"I will allow you the salary of another girl, so that this particular young lady may give all her attention to my work," said Stafford. "Will that be agreeable?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then please make the arrangement as soon as possible. I would like to meet the young woman and impress on her the fact that much of my business done over the telephone is of a highly confidential nature."

"Very well, Mr. Stafford," replied the manager, "but which young lady is it?"

Stafford paused and he felt as if he was going to blush.

All that he knew of her was her voice.

Knew Her Only by Voice

"Er—," he started, embarrassed. "I don't think I know her name. I only know her voice. It is very soft and rich, the voice of a refined young woman."

"Oh, I think it must be Miss Blaine—Virginia Blaine," Kahn suggested. "Everybody in the hotel is in love with her. She is a fine young woman and most capable. She was not meant for such humble work."

"How did she come to seek employment of that sort?" asked Stafford.

"Bad luck, I understand from one of the other girls. She is an orphan with a younger sister."

"An orphan and fighting for a living in New York!" exclaimed Stafford. "Poor girl."

"Miss Blaine may have gone for the evening," said the manager, "but you may talk with her to-morrow."

"Thank you."

The hotel manager departed.

Stafford went to his dining room and, in lonely state, had his dinner.

Oku had served at a little table close to a wide window. The board was covered with the finest of napery and glistened with cut glass and silver. A jar of roses was in the centre.

Stafford tossed off his cocktail and moodily tackled his consomme.

"God, but it's dull here, Oku," he said to his servant.

Oku smiled as he hustled about.

"Wine now, Misser Stafford?" he asked in his quaint Japanese accent.

"Yes, bring the wine."

"Excuse, excuse," said Oku, with a deep bow, as he hurried for the wine.

Stafford glanced about him, at the splendid engravings and paintings on his walls, at the exquisite damask curtains drawn back from the windows, at the marble and bronze ornaments and then at the silver and ices and cut glass before him.

He smiled cynically.

"Oh, well," he sighed, "I can go to the theatre or the opera when I get this dinner done. Perhaps I'll run into somebody worth meeting."

Alone With the Blue Devils

He was bored and lonely.

Oku poured the wine and he drank it eagerly as if it would drive away the blue devils.

His telephone rang.

"Answer it, Oku," he instructed his servant.

Oku picked up the receiver.

"Yes; excuse; excuse; Misser Stafford, please?" said Oku into the instrument.

"Who is it?" asked Stafford.

"Misser Kahn, sir."

"Ask him what he wants."

"Misser Stafford say, what you want, at dinner, please."

He listened and turned to his master.

"Misser Kahn say young lady is downstairs."

Stafford jumped to his feet.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox on the Richeson Case

Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox, most famous poetess the world has ever known, has written for to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN a brilliant and sympathetic article on the fate of pretty Avis Linnell and on the case of the Rev. She points out the striking similarity between the two men. Mrs. Wilcox's article is the most remarkable and fascinating of any yet written on the most interesting crime of the century. It Provides for a National Reserve Association Capitalized at $200,000,000.

The first report of the National Monetary Commission, nearly four years ago as a result of the panic of 1907, was made public to-day.

The commission has been at work for four years, and last summer Congress passed a resolution requesting that a finding and report be made and that the commission dissolve shortly after the filing.

The bill will be in fifty-nine sections, will be laid before Congress on Tuesday next, and in general will follow the lines of the so-called Aldrich plan. The commission's bill, however, shows some important changes from the Aldrich plan, but it is essentially the same.

The bill incorporates the National Reserve Association of the United States, with a paid-in capital of $200,000,000. Through fifteen branches of the association, each branch being the centre of a group of banking associations or banks, the National Reserve is authorized to issue notes against properly indorsed commercial paper. State banks and trust companies may become shareholders in the Reserve Association, providing they subscribe to the conditions.

Protection Against Wall Street.

The banking system provides safeguards against centralization of the control of the monetary system in any one district. This is protection against Wall Street control. The distribution of the stock is made by geographical and not financial standards. The Southern States, with their relatively small population and lesser business interests, will have one more of the fifteen branches into which the association is divided than will New England and the other Eastern States together. The same scheme obtains in the control of the machinery of the association.

Circulating notes of the association will be received at par in payment for all dues to the United States and salaries and debts owed by the United States, unless the right is specified in the contract, and all dues or debts to any bank or trust company will also be payable in the notes. The notes will constitute a first lien upon all the assets of the association. No interest will be paid on deposits.

Foreign Branches Provided For.

Besides rediscounting paper in the interests of an elastic currency, the association will act as disbursing agent for the government and will transact business abroad. Foreign branches will be established wherever needed.

The assets of the association and of the local branches and districts are exempt from local and State taxation, except as to real estate, though a federal tax falls automatically upon the association whenever it fails to maintain the fifty per cent. reserve required by the act.

Sixty days after the bill's passage books for subscription to the capital stock of the National Reserve Association will be opened, an allowance for expenses by the government being made, though the advances must afterward be repaid from the profits of the association.

No one can say when the bill will reach the final stage of enactment in Congress. The fight for it as it stands, or for its amendment, is bound to be persistent, for even though tariff and trust matters will probably crowd out final votes in either house.

For Term of Fifty Years.

The enacting clause of the bill provides for the creation of the National Reserve Association of the United States. The term is for fifty years from the date of the filing with the Controller of the Currency of a certificate provided for in the bill, with a paid-in capital equal to 20 per cent. of the paid-in and unimpaired capital of such banks as may subscribe for membership.

One hundred million dollars of the capital stock shall be paid in in cash before the association is authorized, and the remainder is to be in installments as called for. The outstanding capital stock may be increased from time to time, or may be decreased. The head office of the association is to be at Washington. After its incorporation, the association shall have the ordinary powers and rights of a corporation.

All national banks and all banks or trust companies chartered by the laws of any State of the United States or of the District of Columbia, complying with the requirements for membership, may subscribe to the capital to the amount of 20 per cent. of its paid-in and unimpaired capital. Fifty per cent. of the subscription shall be fully paid in the remainder shall be outstanding liability of the subscribers, subject to call or payment whenever necessary.

How a Bank Subscribes.

The subscriptions of a bank or trust company incorporated under the laws of any State or of the District of Columbia shall be paid in capital stock of the Reserve Association shall be made subject to the following conditions:

First—That the said bank it shall have a paid-in and unimpaired capital of not less than that required for a national bank in the same locality; and that if it is a trust company, it shall have an unimpaired surplus of not less than 20 per centum of its capital, and if located in a city having a population of 6,000 inhabitants or less shall have a paid-in and unimpaired capital of not less than $25,000; if located in a city having a population of more than 6,000 inhabitants and not more than 50,000 inhabitants, shall have a paid-in and unimpaired capital of not less than $100,000; if located in a city having a population of more than 50,000 inhabitants and not more than 200,000 inhabitants, shall have a paid-in and unimpaired capital of not less than $200,000; if located in a city having a population of more than 200,000 inhabitants and not more than 300,000 inhabitants, shall have a paid-in and unimpaired capital of not less than $300,000; if located in a city having a population of more than 300,000 inhabitants and not more than 400,000 inhabitants, shall have a paid-in and unimpaired capital of not less than $400,000, and if located in a city having a population of more than 400,000 inhabitants shall have a paid-in and unimpaired capital of not less than $500,000.

Reserve Required.

Second—That it shall have and agree to maintain against its demand deposits a reserve of lawful money and requirements to that required by law of a national bank in the same locality.

Provided, however, that deposits which it may have with any subscribing national bank, State bank or trust company in a city designated in the national banking laws as a reserve city or a central reserve city shall count as reserve in like manner and to the same extent as deposits made by or of a national bank with national banks in such cities.

Third—That it shall have and agree to maintain against other classes of deposits its the percentages of reserve required by this act.

Fourth—That it shall agree to submit to such examinations and to make such reports as are required by law and to conform with the requirements and conditions imposed by this act and regulations made in conformity therewith.

Four to Effect Organization.

The Secretary of the Treasury, Secretary of Agriculture, Secretary of Commerce and Labor and the Controller constitute a committee of four to effect an organization, expenses to be advanced by and repaid to the government.

When the subscriptions to the capital stock of the National Reserve Association shall amount to the sum of $200,000,000 the organization committee, hereinbefore provided, shall forthwith proceed to select fifteen cities in the United States for the location of the branches of said National Reserve Association.

Provided, That one branch shall be located in the New England States, including the States of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island and Connecticut; two branches in the Eastern States, including the States of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware; four branches in the Southern States, including the States of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, Kentucky, Tennessee, and also the District of Columbia; four branches in the Middle Western States, including the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri; four branches in the Western and Pacific States, including the States of North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho, Nevada and Arizona.

All subscribing banks within a district shall be grouped by the Organization Committee with not less than ten banks, associations of not less than ten banks, with a paid-in capital and surplus of at least $5,000,000, provided that the territory embraced shall be as nearly contiguous. Each local association shall have a board of directors, the bill providing for the form of the certificate to be issued. Each director is required to take oath that he has examined into the condition of and the affairs of such association, and the board of directors shall have authority to make by-laws not inconsistent with law.

The National Reserve Association shall have a board of directors, to be chosen in the following manner:

First—Fifteen directors shall be elected, one by the board of directors of each branch of the National Reserve Association, in case the number of districts shall be increased or diminished, a subsidiary district shall be entitled to elect an additional director.

Second—Fifteen additional directors shall be elected, one by the board of directors of each branch of the National Reserve Association, who shall fairly represent the agricultural, commercial, industrial and other interests of the district, and who shall not be officers, or, while serving, directors of banks, trust companies, banking companies, or other financial institutions. In case the number of districts shall be increased or diminished after, each additional district shall be entitled to elect an additional director of this class.

Third—Nine additional directors shall be elected by voting representatives chosen by the boards of directors of the several districts, each of whom shall cast a number of votes equal to the number of shares in the National Reserve Association held by the banks in the district which he represents. Not more than one of the directors of this class shall be chosen from one district. Directors of each of the three classes named above shall be residents of the district from which they are elected.

Fourth—There shall be seven ex-officio members of the board of directors, namely: The governor of the National Reserve Association, who shall be chairman of the board; two deputy governors of the National Reserve Association, the secretary of the treasury, the secretary of agriculture, the secretary of commerce and labor and the controller of the currency.

Mrs. Gary's $500,000 Pearl Necklace

Will It Create Socialists? Probably Not. And It Probably Wouldn't Create the Pip or the Scarlet Fever Either. And Besides, There Probably Is No Such Necklace. This Country Needn't Worry About Presents That Individual Citizens Give to Their Wives

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner

One newspaper printed a story, full of figures and fascination, about a string of pearls costing a half million dollars, given by Judge Gary, of the Steel Trust, to Mrs. Gary.

Other newspapers reprinted the story, some of them supplying pictures of the pearls, and one or two tearfully quoting the lines in which Keats describes the heartless arrogance of the rich.

Mr. Brandeis, a very intelligent man, great lawyer and useful citizen, became unduly excited about the string of Gary pearls and the half million dollars supposed to have been paid for it.

According to Mr. Brandeis, such pearls, and those pearls especially, have a great deal to do with our national trials and troubles.

Mr. Brandeis thinks that the giving by a prosperous gentleman of a half-million-dollar present to his wife is apt "to create Socialists" and arouse dissatisfaction.

If Mr. Gary's present to Mrs. Gary drove any man from his ordinary belief into a different belief, Socialism, Mormonism, Anarchism, Platonism, or any other ism, that would be rather a feeble-minded man.

No country is ever going to be injured by the fact that a man who is rich decides to spend his money to please his wife.

When a man does some important piece of work, the right thing is to give him the reward that he deserves.

In Africa, when a chief proves that he can kill man-eating lions or feed the village by slaughtering a hippopotamus, the chief asks for forty or fifty wives and he gets them.

His services are cheap at the price. We look with horror upon forty or fifty wives living under one roof, but, in a savage neighborhood, it is well to let the chief have his way, since he wouldn't kill the lion or the hippopotamus otherwise.

Here in America, when we want a man to do a big piece of work, the organizing of an industry, the building of a great railroad, he expects us to give him a lot of money and let him spend it as he likes. And for the time being that is the best thing to do—he wouldn't build the railroad, or organize the industry, or develop the country's resources, if you didn't pay him as he wants to be paid.

If Mr. Gary really wanted to have half a million dollars and buy a string of pretty white beads and give it to his wife, nobody ought to complain.

It would be different if Mr. Gary spent the half million dollars to buy a half a hundred nautch girls and had them dancing wildly in some hotel—that would be harmful.

It would be extremely bad if Mr. Gary spent his half million, or his whole million, keeping hundreds of thousands of servants, wasting their time waiting on him, instead of doing useful work—but he doesn't do that.

According to the story, Mr. Gary had $500,000 in the bank.

Mrs. Gary saw a pretty string of white beads in a window.

Mr. Gary called upon the gentleman who owned the white beads.

The gentleman rubbed his hands together suavely, bowed profoundly, handed the beads to Mr. Gary, and got Mr. Gary's check for a half a million dollars.

WHAT DIFFERENCE DOES IT MAKE TO THE WORLD WHETHER THE $500,000 IS IN MR. GARY'S BANK AND THE BEADS IN THE JEWELLER'S WINDOW OR THE BEADS IN MR. GARY'S SAFE AND THE $500,000 IN THE JEWELLER'S BANK?

The $500,000 still exists. The beads still exist. Nothing has been thrown away or wasted.

Why should a man suddenly give up Methodism and become a Socialist because the $500,000 that used to belong to Gary now belongs to the jeweller, and the beads that belonged to the jeweller now belong to Gary?

This is how we look at it. What do you think about it?

In addition to all of the above, it may as well be said THAT MR. GARY NEVER BOUGHT THE $500,000 STRING OF PEARLS AT ALL. There was no such string.

Mr. Gary presumably buys presents for his wife occasionally, and he ought to. That is his business—not the business of anybody else, and it should change no Mohammedan into a Socialist.

Mr. Brandeis knows perfectly well that it really doesn't matter whether Mr. Gary keeps half a million dollars or gives it away.

And he knows that no man with brains enough to do anybody any good will be agitated because a rich man gets something for his wife—that, in fact, is rather a pleasant episode in a not too perfect civilization.

By the way, the story of the half-million-dollar string of pearl beads that never existed was really useful, and it is useful at this minute, because it puts before the eyes of some millions of citizens the beautiful lines that Keats wrote in his "Isabella; or, the Pot of Basil." Keats was telling of some very proud brothers, proud because they had lots of money, quite in the modern fashion—and this is how he writes:

For them the Ceylon diver held his breath,
And went all naked to the hungry shark;
For them his ears gush'd blood; for them in death
The seal on the cold ice with piteous bark
Lay full of darts; for them alone did seethe
A thousand men in troubles wide and dark;
Half-ignorant, they turn'd an easy wheel,
That set sharp racks at work, to pinch and peal.

Why were they proud? Because their marble founts
Gush'd with more pride than do a wretch's tears?
Why were they proud? Because fair orange-mounts
Were of more soft ascent than lazar stairs?
Why were they proud? Because red-lin'd accounts
Were richer than the songs of Grecian years?
Why were they proud? Again we ask aloud,
Why, in the name of Glory, were they proud?

Ella Wheeler Wilcox on the Richeson Case
Bishop Hamilton on the Richeson Case
Clement L. Pollock on the Richeson Case

All in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN

Ella Wheeler Wilcox, the famous poetess, whose writings are known wherever the English language is read, who has unnumbered friends whom she has met personally in her journeys over the earth and a greater number who know her through the medium of her pen, has made a study of the great Richeson murder case.

Mrs. Wilcox regards this absorbing tragedy from a literary and human standpoint from which it is given to but few persons to consider it. To her it recalls the historic story of love and misery of Abelard and Heloise, many centuries ago.

With graphic pen Mrs. Wilcox sketches the story of the historic sweethearts, and then draws a parallel of an illuminating character between that and the romance of Richeson and Avis Linnell.

The hundreds of thousands of admirers of Mrs. Wilcox in New England will want to read what she says on New England's greatest murder mystery. It will be published EXCLUSIVELY in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

John W. Hamilton, D. D., LL. D., Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church of New England, has also written a thoughtful article for to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN on the Richeson case. Bishop Hamilton makes some suggestions as to how the newspapers should treat the forthcoming trial.

"We ministers want the truth brought out in this Richeson trial," he says. "We want light and not darkness."

Clement L. Pollock, of the editorial staff of this newspaper, has written an analysis of the most interesting phase of the remarkable case, a feature that has not hitherto been explained. This article will cause those who have been following the developments in the mystery to look at it from a new angle.

It will be printed in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN, together with other illustrated feature articles and all of the latest news in the great court drama that is being staged to start a week from to-morrow.

Nearly everybody is talking of the Richeson case now. EVERYBODY will be talking about it after they read to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN. Order it TO-DAY.

Little Bobbie

He Writes About Shakespeare Sisters.

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

WIFE, sed Pa to Ma wen he calm in last nite, here is a card for you, wich I can't malk out. Who is the Shakespeer Sisters, sed Pa. Doan't you beelong to enuff of them fool societies alreddy?

I wish you wud pick yure langwidge a little more careful, sed Ma, the Shakespeer Sisters is anything but a fool society. They are a lot of great & noble wimmen wich is doing thare best to show that that wunderful bard of Avon, beelongs in a class all by hisself. All I ask you to do, sed Ma, is to stay here until 8 o'clock this evning & then you will see the kinds of minds with wich I cum in daily contack.

Well, sed Pa, to tell you the truth, I was going to be in a turnament at the bilyard parlor tonite, but jest to show you that I am gittin I will hang around here insted. Even litlel Bobbie will show that he is a chip off the old block. You will stick, too, wont you, Bobbie, sed Pa.

I was thinking I wud rather go out & play marbels, I told Pa, but if you want to stay it out, my place is at yure side.

There you go, sed Ma to me, you are jest like yure father, he wants to play bilyards & you want to play marbels. Neether of you wants to see these butiful & famed wimmen wen they cum here to talk about Mister Shakespeer & all the wunderful things wich he rote. They were going to talk about Othello, Ma sed, Othello the Moor.

You mean the fellow that choked his wife with a pillow? sed Pa.

Yes, sed Ma, the brute.

Now I am sure I will stay, sed Pa, & jest then the ladies calm in, the Shakespeer Sisters. Most of them was kind of old maidy, thare was ten of them—& only (1) of them was fat & she was married.

There was a awful tall & Slim gurl thare, her naim was Miss Bludso. Ma told Pa that she was a gradoate of Vassar in the old days. She was the foarmaister & the minuit she got in her seet at the hed of the tabel she said Ladies, etc., we are hear to discuss the greatest geeqrus that was ever on the face of the earth. I refer to William Shakespeer. Now, ladies, etc., sed Miss Bludso, we are confronted with our question: Was Hamlet insane?

Sure he was a bug, sed Pa.

Pardon me, sed Miss Bludso, what did you say he was?

I said Hamlet was a nut, sed Pa, meaning that he was balmy in the bean. Anybody that ever heard his ravings of John McCullogh to the Gladiators in the grate chariot race scene wud know that, sed Pa. Of course he was crazy, sed Pa, he should have been locked up long before thay took the step.

There is a lot of peepul outside the inside, sed Miss Bludso, that ought to be inside, out of the outside. Now, sisters, we will talk up the subject of the evening, was Othello out of his mind wen he put a pillow over his wife's face? What do you think, sir, she asked Pa.

Well, sed Pa, kind of careful, maybe she was talking too much at the time. I don't think he meant no real harm.

But the woman perished, sed Miss Bludso. Now, sisters, sed Miss Bludso, we will each lift up a sparkling clase of cold water & drink to the grate Shakespeer, the only man that ever had the currage to show up Man in his true colors. Won't you drink that toast with us? She asked Pa.

No thank you, sed Pa, I aint thirsty.

MRS. MARY MORTON KEHEW says that "on election day it is certain that Boston citizens will demand in their schools 'a new birth of freedom, that government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish' from our city." Mrs. Kehew is president of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union. She means that, in her opinion, Mrs. Susan W. FitzGerald is going to be elected to the School Committee.
